

Chapter 1193 Key To The Secret Warehouse

Margaret said excitedly, "By analyzing the existing information, we might have found a lead. This key must have something to do with the Murray family's secret warehouse at the port."

"Secret warehouse?" Trevor asked. He had just returned to Corden, so he didn't know about the development of the investigation yet.

Margaret explained, "According to our surveillance, Aldwin met up with a few people, who we suspect are members of Mobius, at the port six days ago. They must have gone there for a secret transaction, so we investigated the port."

"And you found that suspicious warehouse?" Trevor summed up.

Margaret nodded. "The Murray family is a major shareholder of the port and is responsible for its operations and management. The warehouse has a custom-made door lock. It can't open it by force because it has a built-in alarm system."

Trevor looked pensive. "But if those people were really members of Mobius, shouldn't we do it anyway? We should break in and search inside."

Margaret shook her head. "I know, but they are very vigilant. The door is made of thick alloy. It can't be easily broken down. Besides, the Murray family is powerful here in Corden. We can't afford to make a reckless move."

Then she smiled. "But the key you found might be the key to the warehouse. It's a great lead."

John was surprised.

His bewildered gaze shifted from Margaret to Trevor.

Trevor was really something.

Rubbing his hands uneasily, John withdrew his gaze from Trevor.

He couldn't bring himself to apologize to Trevor because of embarrassment.

"If Aldwin notices that the key is missing, he'll immediately report it to Mobius," Margaret continued. "Then they will transfer the goods as soon as possible."

"So what's the plan?" John asked.

Margaret glanced at him. "We'll move before they take notice of the missing key. I've contacted the police station to inspect the warehouse. They'll go there later, at six o'clock. Dragon, you have to hide your identity and join the police in the inspection. If you have any questions, you can contact the police director. He knows you're a member of Klein."

Agreeing with Margaret's plan, Trevor nodded.

John suddenly perked up.

Attacking the Murray family's secret warehouse was probably the biggest operation of Klein's Corden branch so far.

This was his chance to prove himself!

John had a personal plan. After feeling humiliated by Trevor, he decided to take this opportunity to get back at him.

It wasn't a big deal that Margaret made Trevor the head of the operation.

John just had to search the warehouse first and find relevant evidence. If that happened, he could keep his title as Klein's Corden branch's top agent. Just thinking about it made John excited.

He secretly called upon some agents of the operation team whom he had good ties with in the branch.

After gathering enough people, he wasted no time to convince them.

"This is our chance to get recognition, guys. All we have to do is attack the warehouse and arrest the members of Mobius before everyone else."

The agents exchanged glances.

Calvin Graber, one of the five agents, said after a moment, "We don't do this for recognition, John. But since you invited us, we will join you."

The rest of the agents nodded in agreement.

John threw a punch in the air and exclaimed, "Okay, great!"

