

Chapter 1202 A Blind Date

Trevor looked in the direction where the voice came from.

Then he saw a middle-aged couple standing at the door. They should be Doris' uncle and aunt.

Trevor looked at them, observing their behavior.

The middle-aged man wore a thick red shirt and a gold watch on his wrist. It was so conspicuous that it was difficult not to notice it.

The middle-aged woman wore a huge pearl necklace around her fat neck, looking a little vulgar.

Trevor couldn't help frowning slightly while looking at them.

Judging from their appearance, Trevor could tell they had a character to show off their wealth. It was probably not easy to get along with them.

At this moment, Doris' uncle strode over to them and said, "Doris, long time no see. How have you been? By the way, we have someone with us. We want to introduce to you, Wade Pecor. He's about the same age as you. You young people should get to know each other well."

Then a gentle young man came over to them.

He wore a black suit and a dark red tie. His hair was meticulously combed, and his shoes were shiny.

He looked like an elite in the financial industry.

"Hello, Doris. Nice to meet you." Wade smiled and greeted her.

Doris didn't answer. Instead, she pulled Trevor to her side.

It was only then that Doris' aunt noticed Trevor. She frowned unhappily and asked, "Doris, who is he? Why did you bring an outsider here?"

Doris hurriedly explained, "He's not an outsider. He is my boyfriend."

As soon as she said this, the expression on the three's faces changed.

The gentle and elegant smile on Wade's face froze.

Doris' uncle and aunt showed angry expressions.

"What? You have a boyfriend?" Doris' aunt asked in a raised voice. "I told you, right? I will introduce someone to you. Are you going against me?"

But Doris was not a person easy to bully. She also showed an impatient expression and said, "I've told you not to introduce anyone to me. I already have a boyfriend."

After saying this, Doris leaned against Trevor's chest, pretending to be intimate.

Then she whispered to Trevor, explaining, "Dragon, you saw it, right? My uncle and aunt always like to impose their ideas on me. They don't care whether I like it or not."

Trevor nodded slightly and sat calmly.

He didn't expect that the situation would be so troublesome.

Trevor thought that as long as he pretended to be intimate with Doris, it would be enough to deal with the elders' concerns.

He didn't expect that they would set a blind date for Doris.

Doris' uncle turned a deaf ear to her explanation. He turned to Wade, smiled apologetically, and said, "Wade, don't take it to heart, okay? Don't be angry. My niece is a little naughty. It's most likely that she hired this man to act as her boyfriend. It can't be true for sure."

Wade's face softened a lot.

Doris' lips twitched. She wanted to say something to refute.

But when her uncle inadvertently guessed the truth, she suddenly lacked confidence and was too embarrassed to speak.

There was an awkward silence in the air.

Doris' aunt also smiled apologetically and quickly said, "Let's sit. Wade, come here. You sit opposite Doris. It's convenient for you two to chat."

After they sat down, Doris' uncle and aunt constantly rolled their eyes at Trevor. Obviously, they disliked him and deliberately excluded him from the conversation.

However, Trevor didn't mind. He didn't take their treatment to him to heart.

He promised to help Doris, so he would help her to the end.

Trevor looked at Wade calmly. Wade also looked at him, so their eyes met.

In the end, Wade could no longer hold on. He showed a cold and arrogant attitude and said sarcastically, "Since you are an actor hired by Doris, you should be regarded as a guest. But we are here to talk now. You have nothing to do with it anymore. I'll treat you to coffee and desserts. Just move to the next table. I don't want you to stay here. Will that be okay?"
