

Chapter 1164 Departure

As soon as the Shadow Sword was drawn, the entire Shadow Palace began to shudder violently.

Vogel observed the scene with a calm demeanor. Then, he turned towards Liam, a slight smile on his face. "My duty here is fulfilled, kid. Congratulations on becoming the new owner of the Shadow Sword. Once the sword is pulled out, the Shadow Palace will cease to exist. All of you should depart as soon as possible."

As soon as Vogel finished speaking, he vanished into thin air!

"Liam! You did it! Congratulations on drawing the Shadow Sword!" exclaimed Susannah. Idris, though clearly conflicted, eventually extended his congratulations as well.

Liam smiled in response. Without further delay, the group exited the Shadow Palace, making their way back to the Shadow Valley.

As Liam glanced back, he witnessed the Shadow Palace rapidly fade away as if it had never existed.

Susannah gazed at the disappearing palace with a melancholic expression on her face. The Prescott family had paid dearly for this journey.

Nevertheless, with the Shadow Flower in hand and her health issues resolved, Susannah felt she had fulfilled her mission.

So she no longer felt the need to explore further. She smiled warmly at Liam and said, "Now that I've secured the Shadow Flower, Idris and I will be departing from the Shadow Valley. The moment has come for us to go our separate ways."

"Take care," Liam said, nodding to Susannah and Idris.

Meanwhile, Idris stood with a complex expression. He knew that Liam was now strong enough to kill him.

After engaging in a brief internal struggle, Idris ultimately decided to set aside his initial plan and left with Susannah.

Shortly after parting ways with Idris and Susannah, Liam found a secluded spot.

He scanned his surroundings to ensure he was alone, then began to inspect the treasures he had acquired during his adventure inside the Shadow Palace.

As Liam took in the diverse array of rewards stored within the Compressed Space Containers, he felt a surge of excitement coursing through him.

This trip had proven to be incredibly rewarding, with the greatest treasure undoubtedly being the Shadow Sword.

The Shadow Sword wasn't any ordinary weapon. It possessed its own consciousness and was capable of communicating with Liam telepathically.

It revealed to Liam that, in its current state, it was no better than an ordinary-grade weapon. And to make matters worse, it was also damaged. In order to repair itself, the sword needed to consume a significant amount of shadow energy, which would rejuvenate the blade and bring it back to its former glory.

Liam nodded slightly, firmly imprinting this information in his mind.

With the help of the sword's telepathic messages, he gained a precise understanding of what "ordinary-grade" really meant.

In the realm of Primogem Warriors, the entire arsenal of weapons, armor, and accompanying gear was collectively known as Primogem equipment.

Primogem equipment was divided into four distinct tiers. These tiers, ranked from lowest to highest, were Ordinary, Mysterious, Earthly, and Heavenly.

Each level served as an indicator of the strength and rarity of the Primogem equipment. Needless to say, the higher the level, the more formidable the equipment.

Liam realized that the red display set bestowed upon him by the president barely scratched the surface of the ordinary-grade classification.

Even the lowest level of Primogem equipment was exceptionally rare on Blue Star.

Although the Shadow Sword was merely an ordinary-grade weapon at the moment, Liam gleaned from its telepathic messages that in its prime, it surpassed even the prestigious heavenly-level weapons in terms of power.

Liam felt a wave of exhilaration wash over him as he realized that his journey to the Shadow Palace had been truly worthwhile.

As he continued to examine his other treasures, he got his hands on an ancient book about the Human Body Refinement Technique. He had obtained it through an exchange at the points store.

When a Primogem Warrior ascended to the sixth rank, special power became their primary source of strength.

No matter how formidable one's physical prowess was, it paled in comparison to the power of special power.

The Human Body Refinement Technique was the ideal tool to elevate that aspect.

After putting aside the book about the Human Body Refinement Technique, Liam decided to pick up the Lightning Wings.

Lightning Wings granted the wearer the ability to fly at incredibly high speeds. Even among Primogem Warriors who had reached the seventh rank and could fly unaided, none could match the speed offered by this Primogem equipment.

Liam's face lit up with joy as he looked at the Lightning Wings.

"With the help of the Lightning Wings, I'll be able to move much more quickly in this maritime secret realm. More importantly, I can grant people who are with me the ability to use these Lightning Wings, too!" he said.

With a smile on his face, Liam continued to sort through the remaining treasures at his disposal.
