

Chapter 1175 Into The Demon Forest

When Liam sensed a profound yearning emanating from the Heart of Life shard, he didn't hesitate and went straight for the Demon Forest.

With the aid of his Lightning Wings, Liam reached the Demon Forest in just about ten minutes.

This forest was ominously silent, marked in red on his map to signify danger.

Liam furrowed his brows, conscious of the fact that such silence usually masked lurking threats.

Additionally, the aura of the Demon Forest set it apart from Shadow Valley. The air was laden with pollen.

Liam kept an eagle eye on the floating pollen, quickly recognizing its numbing effects.

Taking no risks, he held his breath and used his energy to filter the air around himself.

Only with these measures in place did Liam delve deeper into the Demon Forest.

Inside, the forest wasn't particularly expansive, yet the atmosphere was unnerving. Even the normal-looking plants felt strange. They resembled those from his home planet, but something was distinctly amiss.

Liam moved forward with heightened caution.

Unbeknownst to him, the moment he stepped foot into the Demon Forest, several stealthy, serpentine vines started to track him.

As Liam ventured further, an increasing proliferation of vines appeared.

Eventually, Liam sensed something was off behind him. He swiftly turned around, his face taut with alertness, his hand clutching the hilt of the Shadow Sword.

Yet, as he turned, the previously lively vines now hung motionless.

It was as if they had never moved at all!

A frown formed on Liam's forehead. Nothing overtly wrong was visible, but his gut told him this place harbored danger.

He cast a cautious glance around, saw nothing amiss, and sheathed his sword, resuming his journey deeper into the Demon Forest.

Liam proceeded with deliberate slowness.

His gaze occasionally swept the treetops as he advanced.

The sky above was now almost entirely obscured by the dense canopy.

Suddenly, a series of unsettling laughs echoed through the forest, heightening Liam's apprehension.

His eyelids fluttered in alarm as he realized the sinister nature of the forest. He turned around once more, and this time, the vines made no pretense of inactivity.

They lunged at Liam like a sprawling net, swiftly entangling and tightly binding him.

Then, numerous vines from every direction converged on him, wrapping around his body until he was thoroughly ensnared.

Having fully immobilized Liam, the vines constricted further and hoisted him into the air.

Liam was overcome with horror and fought back with desperate vigor, trying to break free from the clutches of the vines using all his strength.

However, Liam hadn't grasped the sheer multitude of these vines. His sharp Shadow Sword flailed too slowly to sever the ever-tightening binds.

Eventually, Liam accepted his fate, his head hanging in defeat.

He had been too careless!

As Liam mulled over his mistake, a demon radiating a sinister green light from its eye sockets appeared before him.

The Demon Forest was actually this demon's realm.

Anyone who dared enter its territory was at its mercy!

Liam's gaze fixed on the demon that had materialized, and he was vigilant against any potential ambush.

Yet, the demon, aside from the eerie green glow of its eyes, remained motionless.

This took Liam by surprise. Such behavior was peculiar.

Still, Liam couldn't let his guard down. His body remained rigid, poised for any necessary action.

If the demon attacked, Liam was ready to fight back with all his might.

But as minutes ticked by, Liam started to think he might be overreacting.

The demon before him appeared to have only basic self-awareness and lacked any signs of higher intelligence.

Liam furrowed his brow.

Despite his newfound knowledge, he remained cautious. Though the demon lacked intelligence, it posed a lethal threat—capable of causing serious harm or even death.

Thus, Liam stayed vigilant, prepared to defend himself at all costs.

Suddenly, a bright flash emanated from the demon's green pupils.

At that moment, the vines ensnaring Liam tightened even more!

The sharp thorns embedded in the vines pierced his skin.

Liam had initially believed these thorns would merely paralyze his senses and movements. To his horror, he realized the reality was much grimmer than he had anticipated.

The thorns, functioning like miniature straws, began to rapidly siphon his life force!

Liam hadn't expected to be under attack by a life-draining power.

Moreover, the life force the thorns were draining from him was infused with the aura of the Heart of Life shard.

Liam's face darkened.

Shortly thereafter, he noticed the vines were also entangling the demon, though they did so with a gentle touch, unlike their harsh grip on him.

Clearly, the vines were transferring the life force they extracted from Liam directly to the demon.

Throughout this harrowing event, the demon was still and silent, driven purely by the instinct to consume another's life force.
