

Chapter 1193 The Truth

The news of his master's personal visit to Mount Moria left Liam in a mix of surprise and excitement.

Laura's updates about his missing and presumably endangered master had been a continual cause of concern for Liam until this moment.

His master's presence at Mount Moria was reassuring evidence of his well-being, instantly lifting the burden from Liam's heart.

Moreover, questions swirled in Liam's mind, eager for the exclusive answers only his master could offer.

Upon learning of the meeting opportunity at the secluded back mountain of Mount Moria, Liam swiftly made his way there without delay.

He soon arrived at his destination.

This secluded spot was Carden's exclusive sanctuary for rigorous training, rarely visited by others.

Silence enveloped the place.

A mysterious figure materialized before Liam upon his arrival.

Wearing a smile, the man said to Liam warmly, "Liam, it's been quite a while since our last encounter!"

Confusion clouded Liam's expression as he gazed at the unfamiliar man before him.

Liam believed Carlden didn't want to harm him. After all, given Carlden's capabilities, harming Liam would have been effortless if that were his intent.

This realization assured Liam that Carlden wasn't deceiving him; the man before him was truly his master!

The weight of realization descended upon Liam. Why would his master, a figure of such strength and authority, need to conceal his identity?

Such actions indicated a dire situation present.

Liam's thoughts were interrupted by the man's chuckle, who then reassured Liam with a smile, "I understand what you must be thinking. Rest assured; this isn't my disguise. The rumors you heard in the Salvation Society were true. I indeed faced peril, resulting in severe bodily harm. Sumner also died in the battle. However, the bodily harm didn't claim my life. That's why I've chosen a new host."

Shock widened Liam's eyes as he grappled with comprehending his master's revelations.

The concept of bodily harm and selecting a new host baffled Liam.

Such information surpassed anything Liam had encountered previously!

Liam's master said, "Let me elaborate. I hail not from Blue Star but from another universe's civilization. However, rest assured, I'm on the human race's side. Upon my arrival at Blue Star, there were two outsiders—me and the Pope of the Saint Society. Even in the vast expanse known as the Cosmic realm, the Saint Society holds significant sway. Essentially, it operates as a division of the esteemed Blood Clan, one of the top ten formidable races renowned for their power."

After a pause, he continued, "Within the Saint Society, many humans have betrayed their own kind. The Pope of the Saint Society is a prime example of such treachery. He surpasses me in strength and has successfully infiltrated and corrupted a substantial portion of my organization—the Salvation Society. So, Liam, we're facing a formidable challenge. You must remain vigilant! Allowing this situation to escalate could result in the Saint Society gaining control over Blue Star."

Liam drew a deep breath, his eyes widening in shock.

The revelations from his master exceeded anything he had anticipated!

Continuing, his master advised, "Remember, the world is vast and full of surprises. Never become overly confident. Strengthening yourself requires a disciplined and measured approach; don't rush things, understand?"
