

Chapter 1287 City Lord

Caden's words struck like a thunderclap.

Liam knew who Caden was.

Caden was none other than the Lord of Rosefinch, a figure of immense influence not only within the Rosefinch Galaxy but also among the entire Human Clan.

And yet, this influential figure was considering finding a mentor for him?

Liam could deduce that anyone recommended by Caden must be a powerful figure within the Human Clan.

The mentor's status would likely be higher than Caden's.

This thought sparked a blend of excitement and anticipation in Liam.

But amidst his enthusiasm, doubts began to creep in.

Why would someone as significant as Caden want to find a mentor for him?

Seeing the confusion on Liam's face, Caden chuckled and said, "Don't overthink it. I want to suggest a master for you because you're already a shining star in the making. The Network of Human Sovereign was established to cultivate the finest talents in the Human Clan. The strength of a race hinges largely on its top warriors, and that's why the Network of Human Sovereign spares no effort in nurturing talents for our race. I wish to find you a mentor because I want to see you rise to the ranks of the powerful warriors."

After a pause, Caden continued, "You must be curious about whom I have in mind. The mentor I propose is none other than the Citadel Guardian of the City of Divinity, renowned as the 'City Lord'! Even among the Human Sovereigns, the City Lord's power and strength stands tall among the top ten in the Human Clan."

Liam was astonished by Caden's proposal that someone as formidable as the City Lord would become his mentor.

He felt deeply honored and pleasantly surprised, saying, "Thank you."

Caden smiled warmly and replied, "Liam, you need to understand that despite your current excellence, you've merely reached the starting line of this journey of competition. In the vast world, there exists an abundance of geniuses. The path to the future requires one to work diligently to improve oneself."

After a pause, he added, "A Human Sovereign usually takes on only one disciple for an extended period. So, understand how valuable this opportunity truly is. The City Lord has numerous potential disciples. Therefore, you need to concentrate on strengthening yourself. Only then will you be able to distinguish yourself among the many talents."

Liam grasped the significance of this opportunity.

Indeed, the Human Sovereign was a formidable entity, bestowed with the ability to command the heavens and shape the earth.

If he could become the disciple of a Human Sovereign, that would benefit him a lot. This would greatly increase his chances of rescuing Julie and Asher in the future.

With a heart ablaze with determination, Liam said to Caden, "Sir, I beseech your guidance. What course of action should

I take now?"

Caden grinned knowingly and responded, "Your next big goal is to reach the Primogem King level soon. Then, you need to bump up your authorization to level five. When that happens, I've got a crucial task for you."

Liam nodded solemnly, his eyes showing nothing but determination.

Though the goal seemed challenging, he was unfazed.

After all, boosting his own prowess would pay off big time.

With level three authorization, he could already roam free in the Rosefinch Galaxy.

Level four would allow him to expand his turf across all four major galaxies of the Human Clan.

Reaching level five would open doors to the Central Divine Domain and let him explore beyond the Human Clan.

Only when he hit Primogem King status and secured level-five authorization could he truly soak in the grandeur of the Cosmic realm!
