

Chapter 1290 Liam's Request

Thinking of this, Liam swiftly contacted Caden.

He said to Caden urgently, "I wish to join the fight against the Insect Clan invasion! I have reached the level of a Primogem Expert in combat skills now. Unless we're talking about a Primogem King, I can hold my own."

Liam had anticipated an immediate approval from Caden.

However, Caden's response surprised him.

"No, it's too dangerous," Caden stated firmly. "You are a rare talent in the Rosefinch Galaxy, even among the entire Human Clan. I cannot let you take the risk. The battlefield is too unpredictable, and you are not experienced enough. It's too dangerous for you."

Caden's refusal was rooted in a thoughtful assessment.

After all, Liam was only at the zenith of level ten as a Primogem Warrior.

Sending Liam to the battlefield unprepared could have catastrophic consequences.

Observing Liam's silence, Caden continued, believing he had persuaded Liam.

"Liam, your eagerness to defend the Human Clan is commendable. But you need more time to improve yourself. It won't be too late to join the fight when you're fully prepared. Consider this, if anything were to happen to you, we would not only lose a brilliant warrior, but you also couldn't save your family!"

Liam felt a surge of warmth from Caden's genuine concern for him, yet his resolve remained firm.

He replied, "I've survived numerous perils in my journey from the Celestial Realm to here and managed several crises. And what is a genius if they shy away from challenges and risks? True growth will come from real combat experience. I promise to remain on the fringes of the battlefield and avoid unnecessary risks."

In the hall of the Rosefinch Palace, Caden frowned deeply, lost in thought.

Liam's words had eventually persuaded him.

Moved by Liam's determination, he finally said to Liam in a serious tone, "Liam, I agree! But on one condition: once on the battlefield, do not push too far into enemy territory."

Caden recognized that overprotecting Liam might hinder his growth.

Overwhelmed with joy, Liam quickly expressed his gratitude.

"Make your way to the No. 108 planetary system via the teleportation array," Caden said. "To my knowledge, no Primogem King-level adversaries from the Insect Clan have been spotted there yet."

Liam nodded. "Thank you!"

Caden then added, "Check your emails later in the Network of Human Sovereign. I've sent you a transmission amulet. If you face a danger you can't handle, use it to contact me. I'll come to your aid immediately. Understand?"

Liam recognized that Caden was offering him an additional safety measure.

Feeling warmth in his heart, Liam thanked Caden again.

Liam then proceeded to the teleportation array and transported himself to the battlefield of the No. 108 planetary system.

In the No. 108 planetary system.

Upon his arrival, Liam immediately sensed a strong scent of blood in the air.

He surveyed the horizon, noting thousands of Primogem Experts already engaged in fierce combat against the Insect Clan.

The battle was in full swing.

Seizing an opportunity, Liam quickly integrated himself into a gap in the defense line and joined the battle.

Almost immediately, two warriors from the Insect Clan noticed Liam. Recognizing that Liam was merely at the pinnacle of level ten as a Primogem Warrior, they erupted in derisive laughter.

"Is this the best the Human Clan can muster? Sending cannon fodder to die—how hilarious!"
