

Chapter 1342 A Surprising Talent

Ameer couldn't mask his surprise upon hearing Liam's words.

Then, with a hearty laugh, he exclaimed, "I never imagined Caden would beat me to it! Well done! It seems his judgment remains sharp. Considering everyone in the Human Clan, only the City Lord could help you fully unlock your potential."

Liam sensed Ameer's sincere goodwill and felt a surge of gratitude. Elders like Ameer, who dedicated themselves fully to the Human Clan's future, were indeed scarce.

With these thoughts, Liam thanked Ameer once more.

Ameer smiled and nodded, saying, "Since Caden is also planning to introduce you to the City Lord as a disciple, I'll refrain from intervening. Young man, enjoy your tea."

Liam nodded in agreement before taking a gentle sip of the tea.

As the liquid settled in his stomach, he suddenly felt an immense surge of the law power of the wood element inside his body. Like a mighty tidal wave, the law power swept through every inch of his meridians, depositing a rich essence of the power in its wake.

This law power, meticulously honed by Ameer to 100% potency, remained potent even after being diluted in the tea.

The impact on Liam's body was profound yet within a

Everything was unfolding favorably.

The tea Liam had consumed contained only a trace of the law power of the wood element, but this law power was at its full potency. It was still teeming with astonishing energy for someone of merely the fifth-stage Primogem Expert level like Liam.

Liam felt as if he were bathing in a spring breeze, experiencing an indescribable sense of comfort. Under the influence of this powerful force, his special power of the wood element rapidly gathered and transformed.

Before long, a nascent form of the law power of the wood element began to take shape within him.

Yet, Liam's transformation did not stop there.

His soul power, now infused with the life-affirming essence of the tea, also underwent a transformation, becoming more robust.

Ameer, sitting nearby, observed the changes occurring within Liam's soul power. He squinted, taking a closer look at Liam.

He had anticipated that the law power of the wood element would refine Liam's soul power, so this transformation did not surprise him. After all, he was intimately familiar with the effects of this law power, having been the one to perfect it.

However, Ameer's expression shifted dramatically the next second.

He realized that Liam's soul power was unlike anything he had seen in other Primogem Experts.

His eyes widened in astonishment as if he had witnessed something that upended his understanding.

Ameer's pulse quickened with excitement as he realized that Liam's soul power had entirely eclipsed that of a Primogem Expert. Not even practitioners at the Primogem King level could compare to him. Liam was indeed a genius with unprecedented talents.

Liam was a talent that, if properly nurtured, could signify a turning point for the rise of the Human Clan.

With this realization, Ameer muttered under his breath, "Indeed, the new waves push the old ones forward. Our Human Clan is blessed to have such a supreme talent. I must inform the City Lord immediately. We cannot let such an exceptional young man slip through our fingers. Only the City Lord can fully unlock his potential!"
