Chapter 1304 Mockery

After saying goodbye to Cecil, Liam accepted a third-level mission from the mission system.

He was tasked to travel via the teleportation array to the No. 76 resource planetary system, which had recently become overrun with a variety of unusual creatures due to unknown influences. Liam's mission was to eradicate these creatures and protect the medicinal herbs in the No. 76 planetary system from being ruined by the creatures.

Once he accepted the mission, Liam thoroughly examined the mission specifics.

The newly emerged creatures of the No. 76 planetary system were noted for their exceptional vitality and represented a serious threat.

The mission required participants to extract crystal cores from these creatures to confirm their total elimination.

These crystal cores were crucial, as they could be used either to manufacture Primogem equipment or to be exchanged for unique points.

The mission was to be completed within a ten-day span.

Should participants fail to accumulate sufficient crystal cores within this period, it would lead to mission failure and a consequent deduction of points.

Liam grasped the logic behind the penalty system.

Clearly, missions of the third level and beyond were critical; they were not simple tasks to train the participants but tasks of profound significance to the Human Clan. The penalties likely served to ensure that the participants treated these missions with the seriousness they deserved.

Despite this, Liam was not perturbed by the prospect of failing. He was confident in his ability to succeed.

The special points mentioned in the mission details were the same ones he had previously gained for trading spark metal.

These special points, although not applicable for upgrading authority levels, were analogous to regular mission points in other aspects.

Upon his arrival at the No. 76 planetary system via the teleportation array, Liam assessed his environment.

The area was populated with Primogem Experts, the weakest of whom were at level five.

Given the formidable vitality of the unique creatures, it was understandable that those who were less advanced Primogem Experts had chosen to withdraw.

Liam, only a level-one Primogem Expert, naturally drew curious glances.

When the others realized that Liam was only a level-one Primogem Expert, they couldn't help but scoff.

"A mere level-one Primogem Expert dares to step into this challenge?"

"Aren't you afraid of being slain by the creatures here? Is someone of your level even qualified to embark on such a mission?"

"I bet this guy can't even penetrate the defenses of the special creatures. He's merely here to make a fool of himself!"

The jeers cut deep, and one man even stepped forward, taunting Liam, "Hey! If you're not cut out for this, don't even try. Just roll back to wherever you crawled out from! With your weak strength, do you honestly think you can hunt alongside us? If you're that desperate for points, head over to the No. 75 planetary system and work as a servant for my family. If I'm feeling generous, maybe I'll throw some points your way!"

Upon hearing this, the onlookers unleashed their mockery at Liam without restraint. "Did you hear that? This is Mr. Astron from the Astron family. How magnanimous of Mr. Astron to offer you a way out!"

"I reckon this guy is only good enough to shovel manure for the Astron family. There's no way he would succeed in completing the mission here!"

Liam simply offered a cold smile and disregarded the taunts directed at him.
