

Married At First Sight Chapter 3989

Chapter 3989

If the hand is extended far enough, it can suppress the business of the Labbe family in Havenmill, X Province, which can be regarded as helping Titus.

However, Zachary told Serenity that after Titus's enemies harmed his family, they took over the business of the Labbe family but couldn't fully occupy it or mobilize the real elite forces of the family.

This was because they did not have the family totem, the token, or the seal of the head of the family—critical symbols of authority. These items were in the possession of the old doctor, entrusted to him by Jane, who had handed them over to several respected elders for safekeeping.

The elders, part of the older generation of the Five Emperors Hall, had long retired from public life. Few people even remembered their existence, and even fewer knew the location of their stronghold. Trusting the old doctor to safeguard the items was far safer than leaving them at FC Manor.

The family totem of the Labbe family was engraved on Titus's back.

Serenity had seen the totem and felt it wasn't just a symbol of identity but also a secret of the Labbe family. However, since it was a family matter, Serenity refrained from asking questions, especially as Titus himself knew nothing about it. He was still just a four- or five-year-old child.

The ancestors of the Labbe family were more far-sighted than those of the Jensburg Farrell family, and their rules and systems were more comprehensive. Even if someone took over their position, it was nearly impossible to claim everything for themselves.

Even if ambitious people wiped out the entire family of the head of the Labbe clan, they couldn't fully replace him without possessing the symbols of the head's identity.

Currently, Mr. Labbe managed the Labbe family's business. However, once Titus returned with the head's token, everything Mr. Labbe had built would revert to Titus.

Knowing this, Mr. Labbe was unwilling to sit idly by.

It was clear why he was searching for Titus: to end the boy's life while he was still young and to obtain the head's token, securing his position as the true leader of the Labbe family.

This was why Zachary believed they didn't need to target the Labbe family directly but could instead focus on disrupting Mr. Labbe's private property.

"Mrs. Labbe, long time no see." Serenity pulled her wandering thoughts back and smiled as she spoke to Carrie.

"Yes, we didn't have a chance to meet again after the children went on winter vacation. After more than a month, Mrs. York, you're still as charming as ever," Carrie said, her eyes landing on Serenity's growing belly. "Mrs. York, are you going to give birth soon?"

"It will take another three months," Serenity replied. Her due date was still three months away, though it could be earlier or later. She remembered how her sister had experienced a similar situation with Sonny, who had arrived a week later than expected.

"Mrs. York, when you give birth, can you invite me to drink the full moon wine when the baby is one month old to share in the joy? I was pregnant last time, but I accidentally miscarried."

Carrie's tone grew somber, her expression clouded with a trace of loneliness.

Her mind seemed to drift as she spoke about her lost child. The first time she had been pregnant, the baby wasn't fully formed, and the child's father had insisted she terminate the pregnancy.

Carrie didn't love Mr. Labbe, and she knew he didn't love her either. To him, she was nothing more than a pawn. In Wiltspoon, she bore the title of "Mrs. Labbe," but in reality, she was just one of many women in his life.

It had been a long time since Mr. Labbe had come to see her.

Though her monthly allowance was still paid on time, it was no longer as generous as it once had been. Whenever she needed more money, Mr. Labbe's response lacked the same leniency.
