

Chapter 2047 Surveillance Video

Lexi was taken aback, then she denied.

"That evidence doesn't prove anything! I lost my accessory two days ago; maybe someone's setting me up!"

Right after Lexi spoke, the assistant folded his arms and sneered, "How convenient! Your accessory goes missing just when it happens to be in the clothing storage. And really, who would bother to frame someone like you?"

"I..."

Lexi found herself at a loss for words, unable to argue back.

Indeed, she wasn't influential and had no known enemies. Why would anyone target her?

Yet, she was innocent, so why was she being accused of such a grave offense?

Suddenly, Lexi had a realization and quickly explained to the assistant, "This fashion show is crucial for Rowena Studio. W Marks is where Janet made her start. Why would I sabotage W Marks's display? That would be sabotaging our own efforts!"

As Lexi spoke, her emotions overflowed, and tears began streaming down her face.

She was not the perpetrator, so why was she being wrongfully blamed?

Who could be so malicious?

No matter how much Lexi denied it, the assistant remained unconvinced and suspicious.

After Lexi finished pleading her case, the assistant continued, "You work for Janet, a former employee of W Marks. Maybe you're envious that W Marks's design outshines Rowena Studio's, and you don't want them to succeed, so you did this."

"I didn't!" Lexi stamped her foot in frustration, loudly denying the assistant's claims. She then turned to Janet, desperately seeking her support. "Janet, I swear I didn't do this. You have to trust me."

"I believe you." Janet comforted Lexi before addressing the assistant. "We need solid evidence for such accusations. Please retrieve the surveillance footage first before we make any conclusions or accuse anyone."

"I'm not making false accusations. We have the surveillance footage as proof. The accessory was dusty, but I saw it on Lexi's purse on the day of the incident," said the assistant.

Janet moved to stand protectively in front of Lexi and fixed her gaze on the assistant. "Enough talk. Show us the surveillance footage."

Draco, who had been quietly observing, finally spoke. "Bring the surveillance footage."

The assistant soon displayed the surveillance video.

The surveillance video clearly displayed someone dressed like Lexi sneaking into W Marks' storage room that evening and tampering with the dress.

The assistant stopped the video and turned to Lexi. "How do you explain this footage?"

Watching the surveillance video, Lexi was taken aback. However, she shook her head decisively and denied any involvement.

"If I were guilty, I would own up to it, but I didn't do this. This is a setup; it's slander!"

The assistant scoffed at Lexi's bold denial, realizing a rational discussion was useless. They then looked to Janet for an explanation.

Janet, however, seemed unaware of the assistant's question. She was absorbed in the video, searching for any inconsistencies.

After watching the surveillance footage three times, Janet approached the dress and meticulously examined the tear in the fabric.

After a moment, Janet looked at Draco with a hint of apology in her expression.

"I hate to see things like this happen, especially with the fashion show coming. We need to focus on the clothes, not finding who's at fault." Janet shared her own opinion.

Draco nodded his agreement. "Continue."

"The number of clothes has been reported to the fashion week. Missing even one could harm our reputation." Janet paused, then turned to Draco. "If you trust me, let me handle this, okay?"
