

Chapter 2053 Engage In Intimacy

Janet watched Lexi leave in tears, feeling a sense of helplessness.

Had she said something to upset Lexi?

Upon reflection, Janet realized she hadn't said anything wrong; in fact, she had tried to help.

She hesitated, debating whether to go after Lexi to explain further, but Brandon interrupted her by pulling her into a hug. "Let's head back."

"But..."

Janet pointed to Lexi, but Brandon cut her off. "Janet, you've already done enough. There's no need to chase after her."

At that moment, both the tangible and personal evidence were against Lexi. If Draco and Janet had decided to press charges, she would have likely been taken into custody.

Brandon was resolute. Unable to sway him, Janet sighed in resignation, ultimately relenting to return home with him.

As they prepared to leave, Sonia attempted to tag along, but Brandon was wary of her. He turned to her, his voice cold and unwavering. "Don't follow us."

"But I'm Janet's bodyguard," Sonia protested, instinctively halting in her tracks.

"She doesn't need you today," Brandon retorted coldly. "I can take care of her."

Sonia fell silent for a few moments, then glanced up at Janet, seeking her approval.

Brandon leaned closer to Janet, his voice low and rough. "Ask her to leave. I've been busy lately, and so have you. We haven't been intimate in a long time."

Brandon's words made Janet blush.

"Sonia, don't worry. I'll be fine with Brandon," Janet said after a while. "You've been working hard. Take today off as a break."

With Janet's clear directive, Sonia couldn't find a reason to stay and nodded in agreement.

Outside, a luxury car waited.

Brandon carefully assisted Janet into the vehicle. She waved goodbye to Sonia through the window as they drove off.

Once they were out of sight, Sonia retrieved her phone and reported everything to Alexandra.

Meanwhile, after running out of the fashion show, Lexi made her way home.

However, she didn't want to go there, so she sat alone on a park bench, letting tears flow freely on her cheeks.

Why did Janet trust Sonia over her?

The more Lexi dwelled on it, the sadder she became until it felt hard to breathe.

Suddenly, a middle-aged woman approached Lexi with concern. "Dear, you've been crying here for a while. Are you alright?"

Lexi looked up at the middle-aged woman, whose eyes radiated kindness and warmth.

Confronted with her gentle inquiry, Lexi found herself pouring out her grievances.

The woman listened attentively, offering sympathy while subtly criticizing Janet and Sonia.

Despite feeling aggrieved, Lexi felt a strong loyalty towards Janet and hastily defended her. "Janet isn't that bad. Please don't blame her."

"Then it's Sonia's fault!" the woman whispered with disdain. "She's been causing trouble between you and Janet. If only Janet could see Sonia's true colors."

Lexi was swayed by the woman's words but soon looked conflicted. "But I don't know what to do."

"It's simple. Let me show you," the woman said, leaning in to whisper into Lexi's ear.
