

Chapter 2081 Sonia Reveals Her True Identity

Brandon was taken aback by Sonia's words.

Instead of grabbing the phone, he remained vigilant and asked in a somber tone, "What do you mean by that? What are your intentions regarding Janet?"

Sonia avoided a direct response, instead gesturing for silence.

"Mr. Larson, please stay quiet. Let me take this call."

With that, Sonia pressed the answer button and held the phone to her ear.

Initially resistant to obey Sonia, Brandon reluctantly complied, concerned for Janet's safety.

To prevent Brandon from overhearing, Sonia left the room alone.

On the other end, Alexandra's voice sounded impatient. "Why did it take you so long to pick up?"

Instinctively, Sonia glanced towards Brandon.

She apologized, "I'm sorry. I couldn't answer the phone earlier; Janet was with me."

Alexandra's demeanor softened upon hearing Sonia's explanation.

"Has Janet started to trust you now?" Alexandra inquired.

Upon hearing this, Sonia pursed her lips and lied, "She still doesn't fully trust me."

It was unclear whether Alexandra had detected the deception.

"You better not deceive me."

"No, I wouldn't dare."

Sonia instinctively lowered her head respectfully. As she realized it was a phone call, she raised her head again.

"I hope so." Alexandra sneered. "You've been out of touch for too long. Remember your role as a bodyguard and don't get too absorbed in your cover!"

Sonia sensed Alexandra's disdain for her, furrowing her brows and tightening her grip on the phone.

After a pause, she replied in a chilly tone, "Understood. Janet's been homebound due to her pregnancy. I'll be more proactive in finding opportunities."

Alexandra should have been pleased by Sonia's commitment to duty. However, perhaps due to her cold tone, he felt a pang of discomfort.

"You were raised by the Barton family. Without us, you wouldn't be where you are now. Remember your allegiance!" Alexandra snapped viciously.

Before Sonia could respond, he abruptly ended the call.

A chill wind swept over Sonia's face, her eyes glinting with resolve.

She couldn't shake off Alexandra's haughty tone from the phone call, contrasting starkly with Janet's recent warmth towards her.

With a scoff, she pocketed her phone and opened the door to face Brandon.

"Finished with your call?" Brandon asked, arms folded, his expression unchanged.

"Yes."

She nodded. "I'm here to honor my promise."

Brandon's eyes narrowed slightly. "Alright, then tell me who you really are."

"I was indeed sent here by someone. The one who sent me is connected to the Barton family," Sonia explained. "The Barton family have nurtured and raised me since childhood. Recently, they placed me close to Janet."

"What are they expecting you to do?" Brandon inquired.

"They haven't explicitly given me orders yet, but I believe they want me to harm her," Sonia admitted honestly. "However, now I'm telling you this, with my own safety in mind—I no longer want to follow the Barton family's instructions to harm Janet!"
