The bright smile on Lexi's face vanished in an instant.

After Sonia finished speaking, Lexi stood her ground defiantly, her lips curling in a dismissive snort aimed at Sonia. Instead of yielding, she clung to Janet's arm with renewed intensity, her displeasure evident in the tightness of her embrace.

"Don't you understand what I'm saying?" Sonia stared at Lexi with a frown, looking quite dissatisfied.

Sonia consistently struggled to communicate with Lexi because she invariably contradicted whatever Sonia expressed.

"If you intend to protect Janet, simply stand by her side. What is the need to be in such close proximity?" Lexi raised her chin provocatively. "Don't you know you are not intuitive enough to detect danger? Aren't you afraid you won't be able to protect her?"

Sonia wanted to roll her eyes.

She deliberately concealed her true strength. If Lexi were to witness her full power, considering her timid nature, she would shiver in fright.

Just as Sonia was about to open her mouth to refute Lexi, Janet interrupted, "Okay, That's enough! Stop arguing."

Janet sighed in exasperation. She couldn't fathom whether Lexi and Sonia had been enemies in past life, for the two quarreled every time they met.

If the two continued arguing, they wouldn't be able to conduct the fashion show today.

Therefore, Janet took on the role of peacemaker. "Lexi, your work will be on stage shortly," she said, gently patting her hand. "Why don't you head

"But..." Lexi pouted, looking unconvinced.

Janet noticed Lexi's reluctance and feigned anger. "Are you not going to listen to me?"

"It's not like that." Thinking Janet was genuinely upset, Lexi waved her hands in denial. Eventually, she sighed and relented. "All right. I'll go backstage now."

"Okay." Janet seemed to visibly relax.

Lexi loosened her grip on Janet, turned around and left. However, she stopped after every few seconds and looked at Janet.

"Janet, I'll come to you as soon as my exhibition is over!" Lexi shouted.

"Okay, got it."

Janet smiled and nodded, her expression tinged with a mix of fondness and a hint of resignation.

Upon seeing Lexi head backstage, Brandon abruptly turned his attention to Sonia.

"Is Lexi deliberately going against you?" he asked. "But why?"

Brandon could sense Lexi's hostility towards Sonia.

They both had a close relationship with Janet, and Brandon wanted to ensure there were no misunderstandings between them. After all, Janet would suffer the consequences if Alexandra used them.

Sonia frowned when she heard the question.

After all, she was aware of Lexi's hostility towards her.

She and Alexandra had tricked Lexi before, so her rejection wasn't surprising.

Considering Janet's presence, Sonia refrained from speaking to avoid causing her worry. Instead, she silently signaled to Brandon that she would explain everything to him later.

Luckily, Janet was absorbed in studying the promotional poster for the show and didn't notice their subtle gestures.

She sighed helplessly after reading the poster.

Several renowned studios participated in the competition, showcasing exceptional design works.

She felt Lexi's chances of winning were slim. It seemed like she would cry in disappointment.

Janet decided to purchase something for Lexi as a gesture of comfort. She firmly believed that Lexi wouldn't remain depressed for long due to a mere competition.
