Chapter 1081

Chapter 1081

While Carrie was young and insolent, it was not like she did not know better.

Her mind flew back to her plan being foiled by Serenity at the Dowlings' party.

She was manhandled by Serenity and forced to drink the drugged alcohol by Elisa.

The drug overtook her sanity and drove her to take her clothes off at the Dowlings' residence.

Carrie's mother jumped into action and brought her home in haste.

Carried had to bathe in ice-cold water to regain her consciousness.

However, the same cold bath spiked her fever.

Her parents were heartbroken for her.

Nevertheless, they did nothing to demand justice for her.

This was because the country bumpkin had Mr. York by her side.

Her father explained to Carrie that although the Newmans did not operate their business in Wiltspoon, they were not to cross Mr. York.

York Corporation had business dealings across major cities, and the bad blood may provoke York Corporation to steal the Newmans' business.

Newman Enterprise would suffer as a consequence of her actions.

Carrie's father also criticized her for going too far—she should not have drugged Camryn.

There was more than one way to pop Camryn's cherry and make her the laughingstock of the community, so to do it at the banquet was uncalled for.

If that was not enough, Carrie had ruined their own image.

It would be hard for Carrie to find a husband now that the wives of other wealthy families believed she was wicked.

That was the first time Carrie realized how powerful Zachary was.

Even her parents, who gave her all the love and everything in the world, could do nothing to stand up for her.

+ Serenity gave Carrie a dirty look, acting and speaking cockier than ever.

Carrie winced in fear for a change.

“Just you wait, you country bumpkin!” With her finger up Serenity’s nose, Carrie snapped a threat before turning on her heel to leave.

On her way out, she kicked over several pots of flowers on purpose.

Serenity was tempted to chop off Carrie’s legs. Everybody used to say that Elisa was uncouth, ill-tempered, and cocky.

Nevertheless, compared to Carrie, Elisa rose above all graces.

Elisa was haughty and refused to engage with anyone who did not vibe with her.

She would not hesitate to put the person, who got all over her face to befriend her, in their place.

Carrie demonstrated tasteless willfulness and arrogance.

| She drove away in her multi-million-dollar car.

Carrie planned to go home and have a chat with her mother.

Carrie did not see an issue of hiring a few thugs to teach Serenity a lesson out of spite.

Noah would be the first to jump out and stop Carrie's plan if he knew what Carrie was up to. He had tried the same trick before, and Serenity single-handedly beat him and the thugs up to a pulp.

"I'm sorry, Mrs. York." + Serenity responded tenderly, "It's not your fault.

You don't have to apologize to me." "You're my guest, but Carrie had to ruin it for you.

I should've come earlier, so you didn't have to suffer through her insults." Serenity replied, "There is a huge social gap between me and my husband.

Carrie isn't the only one who sees me that way, and she won't be the last.

The others have more tact than putting it into words." Youth and arrogance helped Carrie speak the mind of the other wealthy wives.

These people saw Serenity as nothing more than a country bumpkin who simply stumbled upon good fortune.

“All humans are equal.

It only matters what Mr. York thinks of you.

Who cares what other people think?” Camryn smiled and beckoned for Serenity to come in.

She said, “ You must be here to buy flowers.

Who is the lucky person to receive your flowers?” |

Serenity walked with Camryn into the flower shop.

She said, “I’m here to buy flowers for my husband.

What do you recommend, Ms. Newman? Can you put together something for me?”

Chapter 1082

Camryn uttered with a smile, “I’ll arrange something for you since you trust me.” Putting her cane aside, Camryn began to design a floral bouquet for Serenity.

Serenity watched Carmyn handle the task with ease and asked, " Ms.

Newman, do you memorize the placing of each type of flower here?" While pairing flowers together, Camryn replied, "I have to since I can't see.

I hired some employees to separate the flowers every time the stock comes in.

They'll tell me where each type of flower is placed.

"My flower shop has been around for a few years now, so I had a lot of time to memorize everything.

I think I'm on top of it." Looking into Camryn's eyes, Serenity probed, "Is there any way you can see again, Ms.

Newman?" With her smile fading, Camryn answered, "I lost my sight from an illness.

I was lucky to even survive.

I'm fine without my sight.

I'm just grateful to be alive." Due to the sudden blindness, she nearly lost her life to depression and insanity.

Nevertheless, she had to persevere.

She could not give up on life just like that.

With that, she found her reason to live again.
She adapted from a life of light to darkness.
| Looking at the world with her heart, she was able to peek into the souls of men.
Sometimes, humans were scarier than the supernatural.
Serenity felt sorry and said, "Medical care and medicine are always evolving and developing. You should get eye surgery if you have the money and when the opportunity arises. You might see the light of day again.
"My aunt has never given up on getting me treated.
She has brought me to see a lot of ophthalmologists over the years, and she still does." Camryn was fortunate to have an aunt who doted on her.
She had three aunts, and only her youngest aunt was closest to her dad and felt bad for Camryn. Her other two aunts were closer to her stepfather as her stepfather was a rich and powerful man who managed Newman Enterprise.
Serenity was at a loss for words.

"Don't feel bad for me.
I have been blind for a decade.
Darkness is my friend now.
I can function normally without a cane in familiar environments." Camryn was the one consoling Serenity instead.
She helped Serenity with an arrangement and wrapped the flowers up.
Camryn picked up the bouquet and turned around to hand it to Serenity with a smile.
She said, "The flowers are ready, Mrs. York.
Mr.
York will be happy to receive the flowers from you." The young couple was getting along better than in the rumors.
Mrs. York was loyal and kind.
Camryn prayed that Serenity would get the York family's approval and be happy with Mr. York always.
Camryn had limited knowledge of Serenity because her own mother, who was worse than a stepmother, refused to take her to social events and bring her into the wealthy circle because she was blind.

She thought Serenity did not have the approval of her in-laws as mentioned by Mrs. Newman.

That was why Serenity was attending social gatherings with Mrs. Stone instead.

“Thank you.” Serenity thanked Camryn and took the bouquet before asking, “ How much do I owe you?” “Tt’s free.

I can never repay you for the help the last time. It’s only a bouquet.

How can I possibly take money from you?”

“Business is business.

You paid for these flowers, so you should charge me for them.

You should at least break even, even if you don’t want to profit from the bouquet.” Serenity pulled out two hundred bucks.

She recalled Camryn collecting two hundred bucks from Carrie at the Dowlings’.

Married at First Sight

Serenity would not take no for an answer as she put the two hundred bucks in Camryn's palm. Camryn felt the money with her fingers before pulling one bill and giving it back to Serenity. She said, "If you insist, I'll take half the money." Since the girls were not close yet, Serenity relented and took back a hundred-dollar bill from Camryn before replying with a grin, "Thank you, Ms. Newman. Your flowers here are beautiful. I'll be sure to come back for more." Camryn beamed. "You're always welcome. You can call me in advance if you need anything. Just let me know who it is for, and I'll have the flowers picked out and wrapped up. You can come and collect without waiting." Turning on her heel, she went to the cash register. Camryn held onto the table as she got behind the cash register and pulled the drawer to get a box of business cards. She retrieved a business card before making her way back to Serenity. "This is my business card, Mrs.

York.”

Serenity drew close and took the card.

“You can expect a phone call from me when I need your service.

Goodbye now, Ms. Newman.”

“Have a nice day, Mrs.

York.”

Camryn felt her way out of the cash register and walked out with Serenity.

With Serenity’s footsteps fading into her ride, Camryn waved her hand and silently bade farewell.

Serenity put the bouquet on the passenger’s seat, buckled up, and told Camryn, “Ms. Newman, you should go inside.”

Camryn smiled.

She only turned around and returned to her shop when Serenity started the engine and drove off.

Several minutes later, Serenity’s worthless junk of a car, as Carrie put it, entered York Corporation.

Zachary had a lot of cars in the garage.

He also gave Serenity a new vehicle on Valentine’s Day, but Serenity did not accept the gift.

Serenity did not replace her car even after the couple kissed and made up.

This was the first car Zachary had ever given to her, so it meant something to Serenity.

That was Zachary's cue to stop getting her car replaced.

The type of car she drove did not define her as his wife.

Seen as the savior by all employees of York Corporation, Serenity arrived at the CEO's office without a hitch.

The door opened before she knocked on the door. Callum was just leaving with files tucked under his arm.

He must have had a discussion with Zachary.

Callum could tell that Serenity was here to deliver a packed dinner by spotting the flowers in one hand and the food container in the other.

Since it was only half an hour until the office hours were over, Zachary could have dinner right away.

He was jealous, to say the least.

Zachary and Serenity could enjoy their lovey-dovey moment at home.

Why did they have to bring it to the office? Callum was tortured every second of the day for being single.

"Serenity," Callum greeted with a smile as his gaze fell on the food container.

"What did you bring for Zachary, Serenity? Is it heavy? I'll carry the container for you."

He then reached out to grab the box when a hand was one step ahead of taking the load from Serenity.

Zachary took the food from his wife while putting a hand on Callum's back and giving him a push.

Callum was propelled right out of the office.

Pulling his wife into the office, Zachary quickly slammed the door behind him.

Callum was left on the other side of the door.

He was speechless.

Rubbing his nose, Callum turned on his heel to walk away and mumbled, "Mr. Chaplin, is your CEO so afraid I'll steal his food?"

He pushed me out! He pushed me out of the office!"

Family was nothing in the presence of food.

Callum was forced out of there.

Mr. Chaplin remarked with a smile, "At least you can see that.

I won't bother to knock when the CEO's wife is here.

I let her knock and show herself in.

That way, I won't be a third wheel and get dirty looks from the boss."

Chapter 1084

Callum responded, "I only ran into Serenity on my way out after a discussion with Zachary.

She's my cousin-in-law.

I mean, I should at least get to sample when family comes over with food." Mr. Chaplin laughed in delight.

"That was why Mr. Zachary pushed you out of there." Only Callum would be so bold to pull such a move.

Well, he was family with Zachary and Serenity after all, and family would not have a falling out over a tiny matter.

Callum pursed her lips.

“What's the big deal? So he has a wife.

He acts like none of us can get a wife.” “You can get yourself a wife who delivers food to you every day too.

All the other single men like me will be jealous of you.” Callum choked.

His nana’s chosen wife for him was someone blind. There was no way she could cook for him.

It was more like the other way round.

“Mr. Bucham has a glow to him lately with a spring in his step.

Love must be beautiful, I guess.” Callum drew close to Mr. Chaplin and tugged on his tie.

“Tell me that when you have a girlfriend too.” Mr. Chaplin was a single man himself.

“I can’t compare myself to Josh.

He’s the luckiest guy.” Josh and Ms.

Sox did not face obstacles in their relationship.

The families of both sides were dying to hear wedding bells soon.

The Sox family had nothing on the Buchams when it came to the family fortune.

Still, the Soxes were pretty well-to-do, if not rich.

Besides, Jasmine's aunt was Mrs.

Lowe, so it elevated Jasmine's social status to a certain point.

Josh and Jasmine could be put in the same social class.

The pair were made for each other as they were nosy and craved gossip.

Callum had to hold himself back from asking Josh to dig into Camryn when his nana picked a blind wife for him.

Callum did not want Josh involved in his love life. It was not like Callum could do anything about it because Josh always found his way into everybody's business.

After pushing his cousin out of the office, Zachary took the flowers from Serenity and relaxed his callous facial features into a smile.

His face beamed as bright as the afternoon sun.

"What's the occasion? The flowers are beautiful and smell good." He lowered his head for a whiff.

His joy and smile made Serenity happy.
Serenity replied gleefully, "Oh, no reason.
I just thought of giving them to you.
Do you like the bouquet?" Jasmine had a point.
Men needed to feel loved and appreciated too.
The flowers she gave him were not worth much money, but he was over the moon by the gift.
"I love it.
I will love anything you give it, even if it's a weed."
"You'll get your wish for a weed next then."
Zachary smiled.
"Sure." Serenity pulled Zachary to sit down on the sofa before uttering with a grin, "Eat your food while it's hot.
I need to hurry back to the shop.
Mr. Bucham is having dinner with Jasmine.
I need to watch over the shop tonight." Hearing that Josh had a date with Jasmine tonight, Zachary murmured something under his breath.
Serenity could not catch what he was saying.
"Did you get the flowers from Camryn's shop?"
Putting down the bouquet and food container,
Zachary got up and walked into the private resting room.

He soon returned with a few exquisite-looking bags.

He gave the bags to Serenity and said, "I have gifts for you too, Seren."

Chapter 1085

Serenity took the fancy-looking bags from Zachary and asked in glee, "What are these?"

Taking his seat on the sofa, Zachary replied with a smile, "Well, why don't you take a look inside?" He removed the lid of the food container and dug into his wife's specially-made dinner.

Serenity took a look and responded with a grin, "Skincare products.

You're giving me a lot more than Elisa has bought me." The guy had been jealous.

He did not like her using the skincare products given by Elisa and insisted that she should only use the ones he would give her.

However, Zachary had not given her any.

1 Taking it as a passing remark, Serenity continued using Elisa's skincare products.

They worked well for her skin and were better than the products she used before anyway.

Serenity must admit that women should not skimp in terms of skincare.

"I'll buy all the skincare products for you." Zachary had no idea about the brands used by women as skincare products were not something he had ever bought for women before.

He asked his mother in private and took a few of his mother's suggestions.

He believed that his mother would recommend only the best since his mother had always been living a life of the privileged.

Serenity was the apple of his eye, so she only deserved the best.

She smiled and uttered, "Alright.

You can buy skincare products for me." "Seren, do you want to have some food together?" "It's okay.

I only made enough for one person.

I wanted to invite Callum when I saw him just now, but you wouldn't have had enough if Callum stayed for dinner too.

It was a good thing Callum left." If Callum was here, he would argue that he was pushed out of there.

Acting like nothing ever happened, Zachary remarked, "He knows better than to be a third wheel." Serenity burst into laughter.

Feeling chirpy as Zachary ate with gusto, Serenity brought up her run-in with Carrie again during her visit to Camryn's shop.

"Camryn is really blind.

She's not acting.

"She said she lost her sight following an illness.

She was lucky to survive.

Her aunt has been taking her to the hospital to examine her eyes, but no doctors could treat them.

"Ms. Carrie is a devil.

I have never met a sister like her." Serenity had a good relationship with her sister growing up, so it was hard to swallow when she witnessed Carrie's treatment of Camryn.

The sisters were like enemies.

Carrie even said that Camryn was her personal amusement since she was not kicked out of the Newman family.

Zachary nonchalantly remarked, "That's her business.

Callum should learn more about her and dig into her history.

The best we can do is watch.

We shouldn't interfere." "But Callum isn't doing anything though." Serenity was anxious for something to happen and be done.

She suddenly felt herself in Grandma May's shoes. Grandma May had a lot of grandsons, and every one of them was an elite in their own right.

Nevertheless, her grandsons seemed to be out of luck when it came to love, and Grandma May was desperate to push them in the right direction.

"Nana gave them a year.

Why should we feel anxious when they aren't pressed for time? No matter the progress, Nana will get what she wants.

There's no stopping Nana once she sets her mind on something." Zachary had a pretty good understanding of his nana since the old lady raised him to be a successor to the family business.

"That's true.

We'll just wait and see how everything turns out. I think things will be interesting for Callum and Kevin.

It's easy to catch on to Callum's love story since he's here.

Kevin is too far away.

By the time we catch wind of anything, Kevin would probably be bringing Mr. Queen home to meet the parents.

"Oh, I mean, Ms. Queen." | Hayden's disguise as a man left a deep impression on Serenity.

She looked so cool.

Besides, Hayden introduced herself as the heir of the Queens in Jensburg.

Serenity wondered how Grandma May saw through Hayden's disguise.

Chapter 1086

“They are bound to come and beg us for help,” Zachary predicted.

Serenity chuckled sarcastically.

Zachary was like a brick wall.

What could he do if his cousins came to him for help? Zachary was probably only good for taunts and horrible ideas.

“You don’t believe me, babe.” “Not at all.” Zachary stared into her eyes and said, “We’ll just have to wait and see.

They’ll come to me as the senior male figure in the family when they’re in trouble.

Even if I can’t do anything to help, I can lend an ear.” Since Zachary’s cousins had the utmost respect and trust in Zachary,

Serenity had confidence in Zachary’s prediction.

“Did Ms. Carrie get into a disagreement with you?”

Serenity mentioned running into Carrie and the feud between the sisters, but there was nothing further about what happened between Serenity and Carrie.

Sure, Carrie was cocky, but Serenity would always put Carrie in her place.

Since he asked, Serenity came clean to Zachary about Carrie's arrogant behavior.

Serenity did not want to give him another reason to moan about her keeping things from him as if he was not family.

Zachary scowled grimacingly as he got up and walked away.

He soon returned and put the car keys to his Rolls Royce in Serenity's hand.

He domineeringly uttered, "Take this car, Seren. Let's see if Ms. Carrie will call your ride junk again. The nerve of her to threaten to bang your car." Mr. Newman had come in person to apologize on behalf of his wife and daughter.

However, it appeared that Ms. Carrie had not learned her lesson.

Ms. Carrie had the audacity to hold it against Serenity! "You can't stoop to a crazy person's level and go crazy with them."

Serenity returned the car keys to him.

"I love driving my pile of junk." "Seren." Zachary exclaimed, "I can't stand people looking down on you." "A car isn't going to change someone's perception of me. Even if I drive the Rolls Royce, people are just going to say that I'm a gold digger, and I owe it all to you. They'll still look down on me." The only way to get people to quit belittling her was to be strong with her own strength. Zachary was speechless. Pulling Serenity into his arms, he lovingly and helplessly uttered, "You're stubborn. Do you know that, Seren? You can really test me sometimes." Serenity wrapped her arms around his muscular waist and replied with a smile, "That's who I am. You can't change me. Just bear with me." "I will always put up with you." The couple shared a lingering cuddle until Serenity nudged him away. She asked, "Are you full? I need to tidy up and get back to the shop." Zachary reluctantly mumbled something under his breath.

This time, Serenity caught what he was saying. He was groaning about Josh ditching the business meeting and having a date with his girlfriend. Caught between tears and laughter, Serenity remarked, "Why don't you think about the times you left work in Mr. Bucham's hands to spend time with me? You should at least give Mr. Bucham and Jasmine some time to go on a date." Zachary pursed his lips without another word. Serenity packed up and rewarded her husband with a passionate kiss. After the deep kiss, she said, "I'll wait for you at home. Please don't drink too much, or even better, don't drink at all." "I'll tell the clients that my wife doesn't allow me to drink. I'll have to sleep in the study if I get a drop of alcohol in me. I bet they'll stop me from drinking too." Serenity was at a loss for words.

Despite Zachary's yearning for Serenity to stay, Serenity still left the office in the end and went back to watch her shop.

By the time of her return, the shop was still bustling with students.

Since Josh had not arrived, Serenity and Jasmine dove right into work.

The crowd of students was slowly dispersing when Josh made it to the shop.

By then, Serenity could handle the work all on her own.

Josh would always drop in with flowers for Jasmine.

Jasmine would also prepare little gifts for him.

The couple looked out for one another and always had each other's best interests at heart.

They were a pair made in heaven.

"Seren, we're leaving for our date now." Jasmine held her purse and bouquet given by Josh before announcing her leave to Serenity with a smile.

Once Serenity acknowledged her, Jasmine took off with Josh.

Serenity was kept occupied for a while until the last swarm of students left.

She then went into the kitchen to heat her food up and enjoyed her dinner behind the cash register.

"Serenity." Holding a bowl in his hands, Mr. Charles from next door was munching on something as he approached.

"Are you only having your dinner now, Mr. Charles?" "Yeah.

Seems like you are too." Mr. Charles inquired with a smile, "Did Jasmine leave? I saw her carrying a bouquet of flowers and leaving with a handsome boy who often drops by your shop.

Is he Jasmine's boyfriend?" "Yes.

He's Mr. Bucham, Jasmine's boyfriend." Serenity invited Mr. Charles in for a seat.

Instead of taking a seat, Mr. Charles cheerfully remarked, "I'm just dropping by to tell you something." Grinning from ear to ear, Mr. Charles spoke in hushed tones, " Didn't I tell you about the bet? I put all my secret stash that you'll continue to run your business even though you've become Mrs. York, and I earned a profit.

You're still working here.

"They won't believe me.

They think you'll just enjoy life as the wife of a rich man and stay out of the public eye now that you've become Mrs. York.

Let the record show that I won! They lost! Hahaha!

It's a shame that my secret stash isn't much.

Otherwise, I'd win more money." 1 Serenity nearly threw up her food.

She congratulated Mr. Charles with a smile,

"Congrats on winning, Mr. Charles." "Tt's just a bit.

Hahaha.

I should've told my wife, so we can put all our money together into the bet.

We would have won a lot of money.” Serenity told him off, “You will be left with nothing if your wife finds out.” She knew that Mrs.

Charles wore the pants in the house.

Mr. Charles got a monthly allowance of five hundred bucks from his wife and nothing more.

Mrs. Charles would give him extra for some cigarettes and alcohol, so Mr. Charles could save the five hundred bucks if he wanted to.

Mrs. Charles was on top of the household finances, paying the expenses for Mr. Charles’ parents too.

He had nothing to worry about, except his personal allowance of five hundred bucks, so he could save half of the money without a problem.

Mr. Charles probably pocketed some money when the stock came in for their shop.

In short, he had a sizable stash, and he would have won a lot more from the bet if he put everything he had into it.

Of course, Mrs. Charles would confiscate the money if she were to find out.

Chapter 1088

Chapter 1088

Mr. Charles replied, "That's true...

It's a good thing I didn't tell my wife." "Mrs.

Charles doesn't give you much allowance, but she doesn't let you pay for the other stuff.

You don't have to worry about expenses for your parents and parents-in-law, social favors, and expenses for raising your children.

You are lucky, Mr. Charles.

"It's not easy to manage money." While munching, Mr. Charles remarked, "I agree, and that's why I left the finances to my wife since she's good at it.

I used to be the one to take care of the finances, but our savings never made it past twenty thousand dollars by the end of the year despite our business doing well.

Since my wife took over, we have saved close to a hundred thousand dollars a year.

"I'm happy with the load off my shoulders and the surplus of money in the family account.

My wife is a very fair person.

She won't favor her own family.

She gives equal amounts to my parents and her parents.

My parents cannot be happier with their daughter-in-law.

"Serenity, I can tell you right now that my family will be tearing into me if I have a fight with my wife." Mr. Charles sounded like he was moaning, but he was, in fact, bragging about his happy home.

They might not have riches in material things, but Mrs. Charles was very considerate and good at keeping the peace at home.

Mrs. Charles was sharp-tongued, but she was a softie under all that tough exterior.

The way Mrs. Charles dealt with life and people was something Serenity wanted to learn from her.

"Honey! Honey!" Mrs. Charles was calling him from next door.

Mr. Charles answered his wife's calls before whispering to Serenity, "Keep it between us, okay? I got to go." Serenity acknowledged with a smile.

Mr. Charles turned around and walked out while heeding his wife's calls.

Once he was gone, Serenity finished the last of her dinner and brought her empty plate to the kitchen. She cleaned the dishes and popped out for a quick chat with the neighbors.

She had been neighbors with the other store owners for years, so a bit of social engagement went a long way.

The neighbors thought Serenity would distance herself from them now that she had become the wife of the wealthiest heir.

It never crossed their minds that Serenity was the same old person toward her neighbors, albeit a little busier than before.

Serenity enjoyed a good talk with her neighbors before returning to the shop to work on her crafts. The few women who wanted to learn about her crafting skill had replied.

All she needed to do was prepare the materials for them as they already had the tools.

She also checked on her orders, stock, and fulfillment.

These women were housewives and depended on their husband's single income.

Serenity was happy to pay them by the day so long as the orders and quality checks were met.

They would be paid by the order, so it all boiled down to the amount of hard work they put in.

The extra income would ease these women's financial troubles.

By ten o'clock at night, Serenity shut the shop since there was no business.

She was ready to go home and wait for her man's return.

A few minutes later, Serenity drove away from Wiltspoon School.

Meanwhile, Carrie got a call from a thug who told her, "Ms.

Jones, the woman you wanted us to keep an eye on is closing shop.

She's driving home now." "Keep your eyes on her and follow her to a road without surveillance before stopping her car.

I want you to beat her up and smash her car real bad.

Don't forget to disguise yourselves with a mask and sunglasses.

Don't let her see your faces.

"I'll wire you the rest of the money once the job is done.

You can take the money and take cover for a while. Return to Wiltspoon once the whole thing is blown over." Although Carrie was willful and rash, she knew that Zachary stood behind Serenity.

Zachary would hunt Carrie down if she got her revenge on Serenity.

Hence, she hired some thugs to do the deed and leave Wiltspoon.

That way, the whole thing would not trace back to her.

Chapter 1089

“Alright. We got it.” These thugs had no idea who Serenity was.

Carrie was not that dumb to let them in on it. No amount of money could buy these people to do her dirty work if Carrie let out that Serenity was Mrs. York.

“Delete my number when you get the final payment.

I can guarantee your safety so long as you do as I say.

“Don’t blame me for what’s to come if I catch you blabbering about it.” ° “Don't worry, Ms. Jones.

We won't breathe a word to anyone.

We're in this together since you pay us to do the job.” Truth be told, Carrie did not even tell the thugs her real family name.

She intended to dump the SIM card after the deed was done and she was through with contacting the thugs.

The number was not registered to her name anyway.

Carrie hung up the call.

Thinking that Serenity was about to get it, she burst out laughing.

Serenity should have minded her own business instead of helping Camryn.

It was time Serenity got a taste of her own medicine.

Knock, knock.

Pulling herself back from the laughter, Carrie asked, "Who is it?" "Tt's me, Carrie." Carrie went to open the door and let her mother in.

"T was just going to my room when I heard you laughing, Carrie.

Did something nice happen? Share with me, so I can have a laugh too." Mrs. Newman asked with a smile.

Since returning from the Dowlings' party, Mrs. Newman had been feeling bad for what happened to her darling daughter.

"I did something, Mom." Carrie first asked her mother, "Is the blind girl back yet?" "Not yet. What's the matter? Did you come up with something new to have a go at her? Otherwise, you wouldn't have laughed so happily.

I could hear you through the door." Hearing that Camryn was not back yet, Carrie had nothing to worry about.

Her mother wore the pants in the house, so everybody's loyalty was to Mom.

No one would take Camryn's side.

Carrie told her mother the whole incident about going to Camryn's shop to look for trouble and running into Serenity and getting into a fight with her.

Picking up that her daughter got into another conflict with Serenity, Mrs. Newman turned wicked and chilly in the eyes.

Nevertheless, she quickly got a grip on herself and chided her daughter, "Your father said we should steer clear of Mr. York for now.

Mr. York is currently still into the country bumpkin.

Don't be at odds with her.

Your father will have to grovel at their feet for forgiveness if we offend her again.

"Your father is a proud man.

He'd never bow down to anyone, and yet he had to apologize because of us.

Although we don't run our business in Wiltspoon, York Corporation is not one to be underestimated."

' Zachary mentioned that

Serenity took a liking to Camryn and wanted to befriend Camryn when her husband went to apologize to Zachary.

In other words, Zachary was warning the Newmans to stop picking on Camryn.

'The whole family sure has a knack for getting into other people's business.' Mrs. Newman whined about Zachary in her mind.

Mr. Newman also went away on business from that very day.

He was worried that Zachary might attack his business out of nowhere as he did with Lowe Enterprise.

Lowe Enterprise never saw it coming.

Chapter 1090

No one ever spoke the truth behind York Corporation's attack on Lowe Enterprise, and now the two big companies had resumed their partnership.

The people on the outside assumed someone from Lowe Enterprise made a misstep that led to York Corporation's termination of their partnership.

Mr. Lowe had repeatedly sought Mr. York for negotiation before finally reconciling their business relations.

"But I can't stand the cockiness of the country bumpkin! She has no right to give me an attitude.

She's nothing once Mr. York is bored with her."
Carrie pursed her lips and remarked, "I can't move past this without getting even with her.

Mom, I hired eight thugs to go after her.

They're stalking Serenity and waiting until they get to a blind spot on the road to stop her car and beat her up." With color draining from her face, Mrs. Newman anxiously uttered, "Where did you find these people? Do you have everything in order?

Don't leave any traces that can lead back to you.

Also, I heard the country bumpkin learned self-defense and can kickbox.

Make sure they don't drop the ball on this." Carrie nonchalantly replied, "I took classes in kickboxing too.

What's the point? I can't even take down our bodyguard.

It's just for show." Mr. Newman uttered, "That's true...

The Hunt girl may have picked up a self-defense skill, but I never heard how good she is.

You should call and check on the progress." Once again, Serenity was stopped in the middle of the street in the dark of night.

She thought it was Noah, the b*stard, again.

At a closer look, Serenity did not see Noah anywhere.

The b*stard should have lost his nerve by now after she gave it to him twice.

Serenity did not dwell on the matter, nor did she have time to think about it.

The people, who made her stop in the middle of the road, started bashing her car with metal rods before she even got out of the car.

While she hopped out of the car, two men swung their metal rods at her.

Without evading the blows, she calmly faced the attack and grabbed ahold of the incoming rod while striking a kick in the man's belly.

She seized control of the metal rod when the man groaned in pain.

Turning around, Serenity flung her arm out to block the second approaching metal rod.

Serenity might stand no chance against these thugs if she had no weapon.

Now that she was armed, her mind was in a more composed state.

Holding onto the metal rod, she knocked the weapons off the other three men.

The bodyguards, who Zachary secretly assigned to protect Serenity, jumped into action.

She kept the metal rod and watched as her two bodyguards beat the living daylights out of the thugs.

Once these thugs were rolling on the ground in pain, one of the bodyguards called the cops while the other phoned Zachary.

Serenity removed the masks of these thugs to find these men to be in their twenties and thirties.

Slapping one of their faces, Serenity asked, "Who sent you to ambush me?" The person kept a tight lid.

"You won't say, huh? It's fine.

You'll talk when you get to the police station.

Do you think you're saved because there isn't any surveillance along this road?" "Missus, Mr. Zachary will be right here.

We have called the cops.” The bodyguard’s formal way of addressing Serenity sparked alarm bells in the man who was slapped.

He hemmed and hawed a question, “W-Who are you?” Serenity amusedly poked his face with the metal rod and replied, “ You stopped my car, wrecked my ride, and attacked me. Yet, you don’t know who I am.

“Well, you don’t have to be scared.

I’m just an ordinary person.

You can call me a nobody.

Only, I have a rather protective husband.” “W-Who is your husband?” With a smile, Serenity answered, “People call him Mr. York.”
