The Ex-Husband's Revenge Chapter 137

"On the other hand, those four people we met on the mountain are truly the scum of society, and they can't be forgiven that easily!"

Leon has always drawn a clear line when it came to grudges. Leopard might have cut him, but at least Leopard had slightly more morals and principles. They merely had a different outlook when it comes to the way they carried themselves, and such differences were not sufficient enough a reason for him to kill Leopard.

On the contrary, the four men he beat up on the mountain earlier had no principles and moral bottom line. Such people could potentially become the scourge of society, which necessitated a severe punishment!

"Okay. I'll go with your decision..." Iris nodded after being persuaded by Leon.

"Thank you very much, Mister Wolf. I promise to remember your kindness today. If there's anything you ever need, I, Felix Leopard Moneta, will give you my word that I'll do everything in my power to help you, even if it means having to cross a sea of fire!" Leopard was moved to tears and respectfully kowtowed Leon.

Despite having slashed Leon earlier, the latter looked past the previous enmity and instead took the initiative to plead for him. Leon's magnanimous attitude left a deep impression on him, and he could not help but gasp in awe of Leon!

Then, at Iris's suggestion, Shane and the others stepped forward and grabbed the four men like they were ragdolls.

repeatedly begged them for mercy. "Miss Young, we know our mistakes. I'm begging you! Please let us free and the ones who started it, so have them sent to the police station and let the authorities deal with them! Notify grandpa for me too. I want him to put a bit of pressure on the police so those scumbags won't be let off so easily!" Iris snorted coldly to her emotions, but what she received in return was their absolute lack of gratitude. Making the same mistake again was out right to deal with the four men on a personal basis, so the only recourse was to hand them over
