

THE CONTRACT MARRIAGE

Chapter 12 She Would Take the Responsibility for All His Crimes

What the hell is she gonna say? Should she tell her mother that she had married Christian because of Julian's betrayal?

No! If her mother knew the truth, she would not be able to take it!

For so many years, her mother's greatest wish was her happiness.

She remembered that her mother often told her that as long as you marry Julian, your father would be able to rest in peace!

But now...

Sarah stood at the same spot and hesitated for a moment before turning around to leave. What happened was too sudden. Not to mention her mother, even she herself could not accept it. Now thinking back to the moment when she registered with Christian, she even felt that she was too crazy.

She lifted her clothes and walked for a distance before stopped again. Christian said that his wedding would be the day after tomorrow. If she did not say it now, then her mother would be even more unable to accept it...

Her marriage was an unchangeable fact, but how should she tell her mother?

She unzipped her bag, took her phone and dialed Christian's number. No matter what, he was the only one who could help her.

The call connected very quickly. Christian's cold voice came from the phone.

“What is it?”

“I want to see you!”

“Where are you?”

“Downstairs of my home.”

“I’ll go there to pick you up.”

“Got it.”

Sarah waited at the entrance of the community for about 40 minutes before the silver-gray Land Rover rushed over. Sarah opened the car door and sat beside Christian. The driver immediately started the car and drove out.

“You didn’t go home?” Christian saw the clothes in her hands and looked at her coldly.

“No...” Sarah shook her head weakly. Her eyes were a little dull.

“Jayson, drive the car to the square in front of you and stop it.”

“Yes!”

The car quickly stopped in front of the square. Jayson opened the door and got out of the car.

“Tell me, what happened?”

Sarah looked at the unfamiliar man and hesitated for a moment. She gently twisted the bag in her hand for a while and said, “I don’t need to explain about Julian’s eyes, right?”

Christian looked at her and nodded slightly. “Um...”

Sarah blinked her eyes. “When I was young, I did not know that I was engaged to Julian until nine years ago when my father passed away. Then only I found out about it. It has been nine years. My mother always thought that I would marry Julian. But no one would have thought that such a thing would happen today. Even though you are also a member of the Cooper family, it had a completely different meaning to my mother. If I go back and tell her the truth, she will definitely not be able to take it. I don’t want to make my mother sad, I also don’t want her to be hurt...”

“So?”

Sarah’s eyes were conflicted. She looked at Christian and bit her lips.

“I don’t want my mother to know the truth!”

Christian's eyes moved slightly and looked at her quietly...

"I just thought of a way in the neighborhood." Sarah looked at him, then looked down at her bag.

"I want to tell my mother that I liked you before... I have never liked Julian.... Can you... Help me make up this lie? This way, the harm to my mother can be reduced to the minimum..." At the end of her sentence, she raised her head and looked at him. Determination flashed through her slightly moist eyes.

"In other words... You want to tell your mother that the person who actually betrayed your feelings was yourself?" Christian's expression did not change at all. He just looked at this girl indifferently.
