

THE CONTRACT MARRIAGE

Chapter 13 What if I don't Divorce You?

Sarah smiled bitterly and nodded. "Yes!"

"Don't you feel wronged?"

Sarah slightly pursed her lips and squeezed out a smile. Looking at the distant sky, she said, "Being hurt by one person is better than being hurt by two people."

After saying that, she raised her hand and wiped the corner of her eyes, still looking at the white clouds outside the window. She seemed to be reminiscing about her deceased father.

She forced down the grievance in her heart and said, "My father and mother has a very good relationship, even though our family is poor. They had a very happy life. After my father passed away, my mother was in depression for a long time. At that time, I took Julian to our home. Every time my mother saw his eyes, she felt that even though my father had left this world, he could see her through Julian's eyes. Then she would felt a great sense of satisfaction in her heart. Not everyone can understand that feeling but I can understand it. Because sometime when I look into Julian's eyes... I also think of my father..." Her tears kept falling, and she raised her hand to stubbornly wipe them away.

Christian still looked at her in silence...

"In other people's eyes, marrying Julian might be because I am greedy for rich families. But to my mother, it was continuation of my father's life. If she knew that the person my father saved back than betrayed their daughter... She would definitely not be able to accept this fact. I don't wish for her to be hurt again..."

Sarah finished speaking. She looked at Christian with anticipation. “Right now, the only person who can help me is you!”

“The truth will come sooner or later. Even if you can hide it from her now, she will still know everything in the future.” Christian reminded her expressionlessly.

Sarah nodded in agreement. “You are right! In the future, she will know the truth sooner or later, but at that time, at least she has already accepted the fact that I am married to you! I will not be with Julian for the rest of my life.”

“Although she will feel a little disappointed after she knows that I am married to you. But you are also a child of Cooper family and Julian’s brother. If that’s the case, this incident will bring the least harm to my mother.”

“There is one more thing that you have neglected right?” Christian reminded her with a cold face.

“What?”

“I am paralyzed! Even if your mother is not sad for Julian’s betrayal, she will not feel any relief because you are married to a paralyzed person.”

No mother would be happy to see their daughter marry a person in a wheelchair.

“So you have to help me hide this matter!” Sarah looked at him nervously.

“What should I do?”

“The day after tomorrow is our wedding. Those comrades in your army will definitely come to attend, right?”

“Hmm...” Christian nodded slightly.

“Can you get them to help you get a certificate from the hospital?”

“What do you want to prove?”

“Prove that your leg is only injured and will slowly recover after a period of time...” Sarah said slowly.

Christian looked at her originally delicate and fair face. He was silent for a few seconds before slowly asking her a question.

“What if my leg does not recover?”

“Won’t we get divorced after three months? I’ll take care of the rest myself!” After Sarah finished speaking, she looked at this cold-faced man with some uncertainty in her heart.

“What if after three months, I don’t want to divorce you?” Christian looked at her with a playful expression.

“What do you mean?” Sarah did not expect him to answer like that. She was slightly stunned and then looked at him nervously.

“Didn’t you say that after three months, I can propose a divorce at any time?”

If you find any errors (broken links, non-standard content, etc..), Please let us know < report chapter > so we can fix it as soon as possible.