“That sounds like Joanne!” Renee gasped, her face going pale.

“Let’s go!” Liam held Renee’s hand tightly. They got rid of all the people who blocked their path and ran towards the room the sound came from.

The dismantling room was guarded too, but before Liam could use the gun in his hand, Renee kicked them away. She quickly picked up their weapons and shot the tightly closed door of the dismantling room, forcing the door open.

The scene that greeted her was horrifying.

Joanne was strapped to an operating table with both sides of her waist cut open, and a man in a lab coat was about to reach into the wounds to remove Joanne’s kidneys. He looked up at the sudden intrusion, and his eyes grew wide. ‘Who... Who are you?’

He took two steps back fearfully, holding out the scalpel in his hand threateningly. His hands were covered in blood.

“You... How dare you!” Renee roared, mad with rage. She aimed her gun at the two men in lab coats and shot their thighs. They instantly dropped to the ground, wailing and howling. “Joanne, hold on. You’re safe now...” Renee said to Joanne as she fought back tears. She could not imagine what would have happened to Joanne if they were even a second late. Joanne smiled weakly as she looked up at Renee from the operating table.

“I didn’t expect you to be so pretty. Your eyes make me think of him— they’re eyes that can tell a million stories. I won’t have any regrets since I can see such beautiful eyes before I die.”

“No, you won’t die. I won’t let anything happen to you.” Renee promised, grabbed one of the two men in lab coats, and pulled him to his feet. She then pressed her gun to his head and ordered fiercely, ‘Til give you ten minutes to sew her injuries up. Anything later than that, and I’ll blow your brains out.”

The man held a needle and suture thread with shaky hands and whimpered, “It was her! She didn’t want the anaesthesia, and asked us to be quick. We just wanted to grant her wish.”

“Cut the crap!” Renee slapped the man hard and snarled, “Why don’t I slash your waist without giving you anaesthesia and see how you like it? Do you want that?’

“N-No, please don’t! Well sew up her injuries now.” The man immediately started to sew up Joanne’s injuries, and the sight of the needle passing through Joanne’s flesh was ghastly. Renee held Joanne’s hand and sobbed, “Joanne, hold on, it’ll be over soon. Scream if you’re in pain. It’s my fault I was late... I made you suffer.”

Joanne sweated profusely because of the excruciating pain. She then shook her head and said, smiling, “I’m fine. I’ve experienced a lot of things more painful than this. I can take it.” “I’ll take you away after this, and you’ll be reborn.

Didn’t you say that my eyes looked familiar? Do you want to see them again? Well, you should go and see them on your own...” “I will. I’ll hold on but... I’m a little sleepy. I want to sleep. I’m so tired.’ Joanne’s voice grew weaker, and she struggled to keep her eyes open.

“What should we do now? Will she be okay?”

“You have to rush her to the hospital for a blood transfusion. If not... it’ll be quite dangerous,” the man in the white coat stammered. After all, she had such a big cut on her body, and it had bled profusely. In the past, all these men needed to do was cut open the body.

They

were never asked to sew up the injuries, so they weren’t prepared for such emergencies.

“I’m so sleepy. I want to sleep now...”

Joanne’s voice was practically a whisper, and her hold on Renee’s hand grew weaker.

“No, Joanne, wake up! Don’t fall asleep... Hold on just a little longer. I want to take you home so Quinton can meet you. He misses you very much, so don’t fall asleep.” Regardless of what Renee said, Joanne eventually lost consciousness.

Liam patted Renee’s shoulders gently to comfort her. “Boss, don’t panic. What we need to do now is take her away. I’m sure Benjamin knows what’s going on.”

Liam was right—at that moment, Benjamin had ordered half of the armed forces in the fort to surround the dismantling room.

“Dad, I’m begging you. Please let them go. I’ll listen to you as long as you let them go. I’ll take over your business and I’ll never disobey you.

Please let them go...” Amber had been restrained by her father’s guards, and could only cry and scream helplessly.

“The three of them caused chaos in my fort, and trampled on my dignity and pride! If I let them go, I can never show my face in these parts again.” Benjamin turned around and said to Mateo, “Keep an eye on her.

The

second they come out, shoot them. I don’t think they can escape the hail of bullets unscathed.”

“No, Dad, please don’t! If you dare to hurt Liam, I’ll take my life!” Amber wailed desperately. She knew that her life was the only bargaining chip she had.

“Silly girl, you’re young and haven’t met a lot of men. There are many men more exceptional than Liam. You don’t have to keep him alive since he doesn’t love you. You’ll find another man.”

“ow some mercy and let them go!” “If you choose to stand against me, I don’t mind punishing my family for the sake of righteousness.” Benjamin’s cold gaze was full of ruthlessness.

At that moment, someone opened the iron door of the dismantling room. Benjamin frowned, and without hesitating, he roared, “Fire!”

Bang! Bang! Bang! Endless bullets were fired at the person who came out of the room.

“No, don’t! Don’t fire! Stop!” Amber could not take it anymore. She struggled and bit Mateo’s arm fiercely before rushing towards the bullets.

Benjamin’s face paled and he shouted, “Stop!”

Finally, the hail of bullets stopped, but the person lying in a pool of blood had long stopped breathing.

The Untouchable Ex-Wife

Chapter 1203

lying on the ground. She felt the breath leave her lungs, and her face went pale.

Liam pushed away the man in a white coat on top of him and stretched his body. He sounded relaxed as he said softly, "Miss, stop crying. I'm still alive..."

The people who had been shot were the two 'surgeons' in lab coats. Liam had hid behind them, so he had escaped unscathed.

Renee was hiding in the dismantling room with Joanne, who had fainted. They did not come out for the time being.

"Master, you're a bit cruel to your disciple. If it weren't for these two, I would be dead by now,' Liam said slowly, staring at the two dead men on the ground.

"How dare you fool me!" Furious, Benjamin ordered, 'Aim your guns at him. Fire again!"

"No, you can't do that!" Amber spread her arms out wide as she stood before Liam, and said seriously, "Dad, it looks like you don't want your daughter anymore. Go ahead and fire. I'll die with Liam."

"Damn it, you're driving me mad! Come here now!" Benjamin had only one child. Even if he was a ruthless man, he could not bear to let anything happen to her. Gritting his teeth, he yelled, "He doesn't even like you, but you're willing to die for him. What are you trying to get out of this?"

"I don't want anything. I'll be fine as long as Liam is fine. I'll be happy as long as he is. If he dies here in your hands, I'll take my life and die with him immediately. Try it if you don't believe me." Amber's tone was firm, and she even took out the dagger she gave

Liam previously and pressed it against her neck. "Go on! Give it a try!"

Seeing that, Mateo became very anxious. His voice turned shaky as he tried to beg for mercy for Amber.

"Master, Amber looks gentle but she's a tough one. I don't think she's lying, so let's not force her. If she becomes desperate..."

"Let her take her life if she's that desperate!

I'll forget about that child. It's fine as long as I have my foster sons with me." Benjamin clenched his fists and uttered, "It's my fault.

I protected her so much that I raised an indecisive fool. She interferes with my affairs, so I'd better give her up."

"Master, don't say things out of spite. It's just her first time falling in love, and she fell for a man who doesn't deserve her love. She did nothing wrong. Please give her another chance. When she grows up and becomes more mature, she'll be sensible." Mateo risked infuriating

Benjamin as he tried his best to persuade him.

"Dad, I'm an ungrateful child. I failed to become the kind of daughter you're proud of. I don't care if you hate me, I just want you to let them go. I'll use my life as a bargaining chip.

I'm begging you, please let them go..." Amber closed her eyes and uttered slowly, "On the Benjamin waved his hand and snarled, "Okay, I give up. I'll grant your wish."

Amber opened her watery eyes. Smiling, she said, "Dad, I knew you weren't that cruel..."

"Don't get cocky. I'll let them go... on one condition." Benjamin stared at Liam fiercely, then sneered, "My daughter's willing to give up her life for you. It's obvious that she loves you very much, so I want you to promise to stay and marry her. If not, all of you can't leave the fort."

Hearing that, Amber's face turned red and she protested,

"Dad, you... Don't be like this. A marriage will only be happy if both parties love each other. You can't force people to marry like this!"

Benjamin ignored Amber and stared at Liam intently.

"What do you think? Are you willing to marry my daughter?"

"I..." Frowning deeply, Liam looked conflicted and hesitant. His heart belonged to someone else, so naturally, he was unwilling to marry a woman he did not love. However, he was also afraid that he, Renee, and Joanne would end up miserably if he did not do so.

"No!" Renee held Joanne up as she walked out of the room. She looked at Benjamin angrily. "Do you think they'll be happy in a forced marriage? Is this really necessary?"

"They won't be happy, but it will satisfy my daughter.

Thus, it's necessary." Benjamin looked at Liam and looked pleased. "Let's forget about what happened. I like this kid, and I'll be happy if he can be my son-in-law even if he can't be my son. A wife in exchange for two lives—it's a good bargain. If you're still unwilling, don't blame me for being inconsiderate." Liam glanced at Joanne, whose lips had turned pale. He then urged Renee, "Boss, don't oppose him. Hurry up and leave with Joanne. It'll be too late if you don't rush her to a hospital for immediate treatment. We'll lose our choices by then."

"No, I can't leave you here alone. We must leave or die together!"

"There's no need for such unnecessary loyalty. I just need to stay and be his son-in-law, which isn't a bad option. What's more, Amber is a charming young woman; it's not a loss for me if I marry her. If you don't go, Benjamin may regain his wits and go back on his word," Liam said softly, trying to urge Renee to leave.

"But you don't love this lady. You..."

"Well, I can't even marry the one I love. What if I fall for her one day? It may be a blessing in disguise for me then."

"You..." For a moment, Renee did not know how to argue. Liam was giving up his future and love life, but he sounded like he had won the lottery. Liam always pretended to be optimistic so she didn't worry.

He would then suffer the sadness and grief alone.

Renee felt that she had wronged Liam deeply. He was always the one sacrificing for her, and she just sat back and enjoyed it.

"Don't hesitate, there's no time. Don't worry, I'll be fine. My future wife won't let anything happen to me either..."

Liam's words brought a blush to Amber's cheeks. She braced herself and said to Renee, "Miss, [you should leave with Joanne. I promise that I'll protect Liam well."

"Well... Okay." Renee scowled unhappily. She was left with no options.

Liam, hold on. I'll come back and save you."

Joanne was placed on a stretcher and pushed into a surgery room quickly.
“Doctor, please save her. You have to save her!” Renee begged pitifully as she followed them.

They had gone through so much to save Joanne, and Liam had even been forced into a marriage;
she did not want all their sacrifices to go to waste.

“Well try our best,” the doctor said solemnly, and then the door to the surgery room was closed.

Exhausted and dejected, Renee sat down on a chair in the waiting area. Helplessness overwhelmed her, and she stared at the floor absently. She wanted to sleep in a nice, warm bed or rest her head on someone’s shoulder.

At that moment, she saw a pair of long legs striding aloofly towards her.

The crisp suit set off the slimness of the man’s legs, and it was clear that the person was tall and attractive.

Renee raised her head and met the man’s cold gaze. Her eyes were filled with tears, so her vision was slightly blurred. Her eyes widened, and she wondered if she was hallucinating.

“Stefan, what... are you doing here?” Renee rubbed her eyes in disbelief. After all the challenges she had faced recently, seeing a familiar face amidst her helplessness was heartwarming.

“To talk business,” Stefan sneered condescendingly as he slid his hands into his pockets.

“What kind of business do you have to talk about at the hospital?
You must be stalking me!” “If you think I’m stalking you... then I must be stalking you.” Stefan looked at the emergency room and asked, “How is she?”

“You know who’s in there?”

“Of course. It’s Joanne.” Stefan raised his eyebrows sarcastically. “You and that silly man

from the Osborne family

Benjamin’s fort. You both sure are overconfident.

ey're really quite cruel." When

Renee recalled her experience

there, her blood ran cold.

They were savage, cruel, and lawless.

"I've worked with them before-they're even more ruthless than your brother. Were you courting death?" Stefan scoffed. If he hadn't investigated Renee and Liam's whereabouts before he contacted Benjamin, the results would have been unimaginable.

Realisation dawned on Renee.

After staring at Stefan for a while,

she said icily, "You must have said the right thing since Benjamin let Joanne and me go without much of a fight."

you’re not that kind.” Renee looked away and ignored him. She glanced at the flickering lamp of the surgery room and recalled Joanne’s final wish. Feeling angry, she turned to Stefan and glared at him fiercely. “You scumbag!” He stared at her incredulously. “What did I do to you now?” “It’s not about what you did to me, it’s about what you did to Joanne! You tricked her and manipulated her. You even watched her fall into the sea but didn’t save her. Calling you a scumbag is putting it lightly!” Renee’s eyes turned watery, and she fought back tears. “Do you know how loyal she was towards you? She knew she was about to be killed, but her final wish was to meet you one last time. A scumbag like you doesn’t deserve her loyalty!” Stefan’s gaze was indifferent as he said cryptically, “You’re not Joanne, so you don’t understand her thoughts. Things aren’t as they seem. She might be pitiful, but your crazy brother isn’t normal either. He deserves what he gets.” “How dare you!” Renee snapped furiously. “Yes, of course you’re the victim in this. You’re the most innocent man. How could you be so arrogant? Joanne must be blind to fall for a selfish and heartless man like you...” 1 Inevitably, she couldn’t help but think, “I’m blind too for falling for a man like you.” “Whatever. You already think of me as ruthless and heartless, so your impression of me can’t get any worse.” Stefan raised his chin arrogantly as he spoke. “You’re really...” Renee was exasperated by the man’s indifference. She frowned and asked, “Is there nothing you care about? Nothing that can truly move you?” “No.” His answer was direct and blunt. “That’s what I thought. Joanne is silly to yearn for a cruel and heartless liar like you...” Renee sneered, feeling strangely disappointed. Suddenly, the door to the surgery room opened. The doctor’s gloves were covered in blood, and he said urgently, “Her condition has worsened, and she’s suffering from blood loss. She needs blood, but our blood bank is insufficient. We need a blood donation. Who among you has type O blood?” “Me!” Both Stefan and Renee raised their hands. “Step back. A cruel man like you wouldn’t donate blood for someone else. Let me do it—I have a lot of blood.” Renee scoffed, but she was secretly worried that donating blood might affect his health. After all, his body had just recovered. If he wanted to donate blood to another person now, it would be very risky. Stefan ignored Renee and looked at the doctor as he rolled up his sleeves. “Let’s not waste time. Take my blood.” “You can’t!” Renee stood before Stefan and said to the doctor, “He looks tall and strong, but he’s actually a weak man. He’s suffering from hemophobia too. What if he faints when he’s donating blood? It’ll only cause you trouble. Take my blood... I’m strong.” “I’m suffering from hemophobia, but it doesn’t mean that I don’t have enough blood. I’m a man, and she’s a woman. Her hematopoietic function isn’t as strong as mine. Use my blood.” “Your hematopoietic function isn’t strong at all! We exchanged your blood for you, so stop trying to act brave!

g.” Renee mumbled and then turned to the doctor.” Take my blood. Now!”

After that, she rushed into the surgery room.

“Take mine too.” Stefan followed her quickly. He felt that a man should bear this kind of burden.

“You both...” This was the first time the doctor had faced such a situation, but he didn’t want to waste any time. “Alright.

Both of you can donate blood in case we need a lot of it.”

Finally, Joanne was saved due to Renee and Stefan’s joint efforts. When her condition was stable, she was transferred into an ordinary ward.

“Are you alright?” Renee and Stefan asked each other at the same time as they exited the surgery room.

“I’m fine. I told you that my hematopoietic function is very strong.” Stefan put his hands in his pockets and raised his brows slightly.

“Yeah, you’re very strong. But you fainted earlier, didn’t you?”

Renee asked, raising an eyebrow.

“No, I didn’t. I just dozed off.”

“If you say so. You should get a doctor to cure your hemophobia, by the way. It shouldn’t go on like this.”

Renee was sincerely worried about him—it was a natural instinct.

“You care so much about me... I think you’ve forgotten that we’re enemies.” Stefan was secretly happy that Renee was worried about him, but he pretended to be indifferent.

“We can stop the war temporarily. Now that we’ve lost blood, we should support each other. We can fight after we get better.” Renee raised her head and looked at the clock on the wall, saying, “Why don’t we eat something nice to replenish our blood?”

“Great idea.” Stefan gladly agreed to it. H Group had and he knew where all the local delicacies were.

They went to the largest food hall nearby, which was full of food stalls and high-end restaurants.

“What do you like to eat?” Stefan asked Renee in a rather gentlemanly manner. “I’m not a picky eater.”

“Okay, let’s go and get some local delicacies.” It was rare to see him so enthusiastic. Pursing his lips, he behaved like a tour guide as he walked through the lively food hall with Renee.

At last, they took a few turns before they came to a very narrow and desolate alley.

When Renee saw the colourful LED sign, the decaying wall, and the locals’ gazes, she subconsciously swallowed.

“Hey, are you trying to sell me to someone?”

“What? You think I want to sell you?” Stefan sized her up and scoffed, “Look at you. Which part of your body could I even sell?”

leave after they give up their kidneys. Who knows if you've conspired with the gangs here?" Renee teased him, but she was actually quite frightened. She walked beside him the whole time, not daring to stray too far.

"You're right, this place is pretty chaotic.

You'd better stick close to me if you don't want to lose your kidneys. Hold my hand tight." After that, he reached out and held her hand.

Instantly, he was struck by an odd sensation. It was the first time he held her hand, but he found her small hand very familiar... It was as if he had held her hand countless times before.

Stefan always longed to hold onto this feeling, so he always tried to approach

Renee. "You scheming man. You must have done this on purpose!" Renee complained but still subconsciously leaned closer to him. She didn't dare to let go of his hand at all.

When they reached the end of the corridor, they saw a restaurant with the language on its sign. That restaurant was not large, and it didn't look that fancy either.

Cyndiango

However, it was clear that the place was out of the ordinary since the pictures on the sign showed that the restaurant served many different types of food.

It almost looked like a zoo.

"Welcome, old friend." The shop owner enthusiastically waved and greeted Stefan and Renee.

Stefan was eager to walk into the restaurant but Renee stopped him firmly.

"Are you sure you want to eat here? This sign is making me lose my appetite..."

"No appetite? But the food here is really nutritious, and it's perfect for us since we've just donated blood. You should try their specialty."

to turn and run away, but Stefan held her and pulled her into the restaurant.

He then said loudly, “Boss, give us a large plate of fried poisonous spiders, salad with pork liver, deer blood, and bear gall-”

“Stop it, Stefan! It’s going to taste weird.”

“It won’t be effective if it doesn’t. Don’t worry, we won’t die from eating these.” Stefan was rather amiable and down-to-earth now, and he was eager for Renee to try these delicacies. Left without a choice, Renee braced herself and took a seat.

Before long, the waiter served them the dishes Stefan had ordered. All of the dishes had a strong taste that could help replenish their blood.

“Ugh, er... are these dishes edible?” Renee had no appetite when she saw the red and black dishes on the table.

“Why not? These are their specialties. This type of spider is very nutritious, you know.

After you eat this, you’ll regain the blood you donated today,” Stefan explained seriously.

He then picked the largest and crispiest black spider and handed it to her. “Give it a try. You’ll fall in love with the taste.”

He put it in front of her mouth, so she closed her eyes and bit it. After that, she felt like she had seen a whole new world. Her eyes lit up.

“Is this... really a spider?” She eagerly chewed it before taking another bite. After that, she could no longer control herself-she could not stop eating it.

“It’s not just the spider. The seasoning used by this restaurant is very exquisite. Their dishes are delicious not because of the ingredients but the seasoning. Everyone loves their food,” Stefan said eagerly before he started eating a spider.

The two of them started to eat freely. They soon finished eating the deer blood, bear gall, and pork liver on the table.

It was soon sunset outside the restaurant, and the sky gradually darkened...

The Untouchable Ex-Wife

Chapter 1210

“Am I that annoying? Why don't you want me in your life?” Stefan lay flat on the bed, unexpectedly calm as he met Renee's gaze and asked her.

Although he seemed to have some kind of grudge against her and she conspired with Quinton and nearly got him killed...

For some reason, he could not bring himself to hate her. On the contrary, he couldn't help but want to be near her. It had become his subconscious habit.

It was exactly what happened this time around. He was indeed Benjamin's partner, but he did not have to lower himself to come here. He had only come because he had heard she would be here, and thus, he shamelessly and eagerly followed her.

Why? He yearned to know the answer.

“I've thought about it for a long time, and I've decided that I must recover my lost memories.

Do you know how to help me do that?” Stefan asked her seriously.

“Yes, I have a lot of ways...”

“Tell me!”

“For instance...” Renee leaned in close to his ear as if she were about to make some kind of grand statement.

Patiently, Stefan waited for a long time. However, all he heard was her soft snores.

Stefan was stunned. How could this woman fall asleep at such a critical moment?! He wanted to wake her up and get to the bottom of it, but he knew she had gone through a lot earlier. She had escaped from that madman Benjamin and then donated blood, so he just let her sleep.

Renee could not lay still throughout the night. She tossed and turned, hugging him or sleeping on him as if he was a pillow. She even kicked and punched him from time to time.

Sometimes, he was convinced she wasn't asleep and was doing all this on purpose.

At one point, she hugged his shoulders from the back, snuggling her face on his broad back.

“Do you want me to sleep or not?” Stefan hissed as he turned around to teach her a lesson.

However, when he saw her childish and innocent sleeping face, his anger quickly subsided.

Helplessly, he adjusted his posture and let her rest her head on him more comfortably.

“You’re so good.” With her eyes closed, Renee moved her head slightly and hugged him tighter. It had been a very long time since she had experienced this. He was warm and strong, which made her feel safe. Hence, she slept very well.

At first, Stefan thought that the night would go on peacefully like this, but unfortunately, something went wrong in the middle of the night.

“Damn it!” Stefan’s whole body was burning hot, and a thin layer of sweat coated his forehead. He felt like he was about to explode. It might have been the strong deer blood, but a fire soon burned in his heart. He stared at the woman in his arms, filled with desire.

No, he might do something bad if this went on. He had to find a way to suppress this heat.

After dwelling on it for a while, he decided to go to the bathroom to have a cold shower.

Stefan gently pulled Renee off him, then entered the shower. Standing under the shower, he let the cold water cool down his burning body..
