

Married at First Sight Chapter 2527—“I can’t freeze her personal bank card. Won’t she spend her savings? She has been so powerful recently in swiping the credit card that you gave her, so I took care of it.”

Matriarch Farrell said, “Her personal savings are not very large.”

Kathryn chuckled. “Not a lot? Mom, she has a net worth of tens of millions. Mom, do you think there are rich people everywhere? How many people can’t make this kind of money in their lifetime, and she still thinks it’s too little? Is it because she wants you to go back and compensate her?”

She deliberately crashed my car. I asked the people at the 4S shop. Repairing the car will cost hundreds of thousands of dollars. If I don’t ask her to compensate, who should I ask to compensate? My sister—is she my sister? She is the blood of the Farrell family flowing through her body? As long as the blood of the Farrell family is flowing on her body, I don’t have to claim compensation, is she?”

Matriarch Farrell was suddenly speechless.

Kathryn added: “After renting out the houses and shops under her name, the rent received is tens of thousands of dollars, or even hundreds of thousands of dollars, a month. Isn’t this income several times, more than ten times better than others?”

Matriarch Farrell said, “Okay, it’s Shiloh’s fault. When I go back, ask her to compensate you for the car repair expenses. I will take back the credit card that I gave her to use. You can reduce the amount of her pocket money to calm down. Okay, don’t say I’m partial again.”

Kathryn cursed in her heart; it was just partiality.

“Mom, you really want me to reduce her pocket money? If I reduce it, I will do it until the end. She is not a biological child of our Farrell family. The Farrell family raised her and treated her with great kindness. She should repay the Farrell family well instead of continuing to suck the blood of the Farrell family.

Cancel the pocket money given to her and let her make her own money and spend it. How much money she gives every month can be regarded as repaying the Farrell family’s kindness in raising her.”

Matriarch Farrell: “Kathryn, if you do this, she will make a big fuss.”

Kathryn: "Mom, if you are afraid that she will make a fuss, don't pretend to leave it to me."

Matriarch Farrell choked again.

Matriarch Farrell said, "Kathryn, you don't take me seriously tonight. You talk like a gun and a stick, and you are full of gunpowder."

Kathryn said aggrievedly, "I work overtime in the company and work hard for the future of our Farrell family. I work like a cow or a horse, but I don't get a good word. I have to be sued. Mom, you accuse me of not doing my best. Well, even if I am a stubborn person, I still have a temper and will get angry."

"Because I cannot cry, you believe that I am solely to blame, mom. You feel bad for the one who can cry and thinks I've bullied her. I'm not allowed to speak louder? She grew up by your side and enjoys everything. Your love should have been mine. I suffered so much and was bullied by her parents. She was sorry for me, but mom, you always acted like I was sorry for her."

Matriarch Farrell didn't even have a chance to speak. She was beaten by her biological daughter. One reproach and one complaint.

Kathryn added, "Even the personal property that Shiloh now owns was obtained through the Farrell family. According to my opinion, even her house, shop, and vehicle should be returned so that she can return to her biological parents."

Matriarch Farrell said, "Kathryn, I was wrong. Okay, don't say it anymore. When I go back, I will scold Shiloh severely. If you have the ability to get Shiloh's personal assets, I won't care."

There was a sneer in Kathryn's eyes; she had already taken action.

The shop under Shiloh's name was rented out to others for business. Kathryn also opened a shop next to it and ran the same business as that family's business, making it increasingly difficult for the other party to do business.

The few people who rented Shiloh's shop have already canceled their lease and moved out.

Nowadays, individual businesses are not easy to run. Shiloh's tenant had canceled the rent, and it would not be easy for her to rent it out again. Even if she could rent it out, with Kathryn targeting her, the tenant would still quit the rent.

Kathryn's purpose was to greatly reduce Shiloh's income, and in the end she had no choice but to sell the shop at a low price, which was still difficult to sell.

Shiloh was no longer the successor of the Farrell family. It was unrealistic to think about how much money he had to invest again.

She froze Shiloh's bank card for pocket money, and the credit card her mother gave Shiloh allowed her to swipe casually. Even if her mother came back, she would not unfreeze it, so Shiloh would have to spend her personal savings if she wanted to spend money.

She wanted Shiloh to go bankrupt little by little. When Shiloh went bankrupt, her old mother would probably retire. If she took power, the first thing she would do was drive Shiloh out of the Farrell family. She would not let Shiloh go bankrupt again. Money came to support an idler who had no blood ties with the Farrell family!

"It's okay, I hung up the phone, don't work overtime, and drive carefully on the road." Matriarch Farrell warned Kathryn and quickly hung up the phone.
