

Chapter 673 A Gift

A few days later, the headquarters of the Dark Night Organization in the delta region got Timothy's wedding invitation.

Timothy had extended invitations to all factions, heralding the Sandoval family's arrival in the delta region.

Although the Dark Night Organization and Black Spider were on the guest list, the latter's members were unlikely to attend in their current state.

The invitation card was sent directly to Prometheus who sensed something amiss and promptly called Liam.

Respectfully, Prometheus informed him, "Sir, Timothy sent us a wedding invitation. He's joining forces with the Sandoval family in the delta region. What's your take on this?"

Liam, currently engaged in covert training with Aikin and others in the outskirts, received the news with a mischievous gleam in his eyes.

Ever since allowing Timothy to escape from the gambling ship, Liam had been concerned about locating him.

Now presented with this opportunity, he didn't intend to let it slip away.

With a playful smile, he replied, "Since he invited us, we'll attend. Leave it to me. I'll be at the wedding."

Liam ended the call and turned to Aikin with a grin. "I can't show up at Timothy's wedding empty-handed. Prepare a 'gift' for me."

The following day, back at his residence, Liam neatly arranged his clothes. A playful smile adorned his face as he toyed with the invitation card in his hand.

Prometheus' call prompted Liam to halt the team's training and lead them back to the Dark Night Organization headquarters for a break. He also collected the invitation card from Prometheus.

Liam sensed the urgency in the Sandoval family's actions. They had scheduled the event for the second day at noon.

He deduced their motive. His recent activities had stirred up the delta region, and the impending battle for the rare-earth mine prompted the Sandoval family to prepare quickly.

The following day, as Liam prepared to leave with his team, Vivian emerged from the bedroom just after he finished the headcount.

Furrowing her brow, Vivian inquired, "Liam, where are you headed?"

"I have a wedding to attend today," Liam replied honestly.

Feigning disappointment, Vivian remarked, "You've been away for days, and now that you're back, can't you spend some time with me?"

Why not take me along? I'd like to witness other people's weddings so I can gather ideas for our future wedding."

Liam fell silent for a moment, grappling with his emotions. Despite his discontent, he couldn't turn down Julie's request.

After a brief pause, Liam reluctantly nodded. "Alright, we'll go together."

Vivian felt so relieved that Liam agreed.

Her excuse was merely fabricated. Her true motive for wanting to go with Liam stemmed from Timothy's directive!

Timothy expected that Liam would cause trouble at his wedding. While sending her the invitation, he coerced Vivian into keeping a vigilant eye on Liam and preventing any untoward incidents.

Despite Vivian's reluctance, she had no choice.

She had been entangled in a situation where she was no longer a partner but rather Timothy's unwitting puppet.

This hastened her plans to break free from Timothy's influence no matter what it took.

Meanwhile, Liam's men had loaded a huge black box into the car, awaiting his command.

When everything was set, Liam led his team to Timothy's wedding.

About an hour later, they arrived at the place.

Liam deliberately opted for a late entrance. He made a grand arrival in a Bugatti Veyron followed by a truck. The spectacle was ostentatious and attention-grabbing.

Liam got off the car slowly. He was still known to the public as Javen. This justified his presence as the representative of the Dark Night Organization.

After the usher at the door inspected the invitation, he respectfully ushered Liam inside.

With a mischievous smile, Liam halted in the hall and gestured to his subordinates carrying the black box. They promptly set it down and revealed its content.

It was a baby's bed in the shape of a coffin!

Unapologetically provocative, Liam held his head high and declared, "I'm here to wish you two a quick journey to parenthood!"
