

Read I am a quadrillionaire

I am a quadrillionaire chapter 2872-He was very puzzled.

Were all Almighties so unique that they would live in places like this?

After walking in, he discovered a completely different world. It was as if he had entered another space.

The inside was filled with the intoxication of a beautiful spring day.

There were countless exotic flowers and plants and rare and exotic animals.

Although David did not recognize most of them, he knew that these things were valuable, and he would cause a sensation if he brought one out.

After walking along the path for a while, he saw a pavilion. A group of people, about a dozen of them, surrounded it and looked at something.

He could feel the Origin energy exuding from these people, and it surprised him.

These people were all Origin Realm Almighties!

David's arrival also alarmed the Almighties, who were looking at that thing, so they all turned their heads to look over with curiosity in their eyes.

Evidently, everyone was very interested in this young man who had just stepped into Origin Realm.

After the crowd dispersed, David discovered a middle-aged man and an old man playing chess in the middle of the pavilion.

Hence, he clasped his hands again and said respectfully, "David greets you all."

"David, you don't have to be so courteous. We're family," the old man playing chess said with a smile.

After saying that, he stood up.

“Since David is here, let’s end the game here! How about we call this a draw?”

As soon as the old man said that, the middle-aged man refused.

“No way! You’re about to lose, old man! Let’s finish the game first!”

“Nonsense! This is just the beginning. How can I lose? If we continue, we won’t be able to determine a winner in tens of thousands of years. David can’t wait that long.”

“Fine, whatever you say! Anyway, old man, you’ve done this so many times, and I’m already used to it. You will always find an excuse whenever you’re about to lose.” The middle-aged man seemed to have become accustomed to this. So, he tossed his chess piece aside and stood up to agree with the old man.

“Nigel, don’t try to ruin my reputation in front of our new friend! I am always willing to accept defeat, so why would I do something like that?” The old man retorted loudly.

“Fine! Whatever you say! It’s all my fault. I shouldn’t gauge the heart of a gentleman with my mean measure.”

“Hmph, that’s more like it!”

The dozen or so Almighties around seemed to have anticipated what would happen between the two.

David looked confused.

In his mind, shouldn’t the Almighties be aloof and look down on all living beings?

Why were they no different from ordinary people?

Especially the old man who was playing chess. He seemed to be the leader of the Almighty gang, but he was so stubborn.

It was obvious that he would lose, and he still refused to admit it.

While David was lost in thought, the old man spoke again.

“David, come here and let me introduce you.”

“Okay!” David replied quickly.

Then, he walked into the pavilion.

After the introduction, David learned the old man’s name was Blaze Helldagger.

His name was pretty cool but did not quite match his personality.

“Blaze, are these all the Almightyies we have in this universe?” David asked.

He figured that since the universe was so big, only a dozen Almightyies were too small.

Even if 10 10,000 level 9 civilizations were needed to produce one Almighty, this was still too little.

Unexpectedly, the originally relaxed atmosphere suddenly became tense after he asked this.

The smile on everyone’s face disappeared.

David sensed the change. He had no idea if he said the wrong thing, so he did not know what to do.

After a while, Blaze took a deep breath and replied, “Of course not. However, they all have very important missions, so they can’t come here.”

“I see. I was just curious, so please excuse me,” David explained with a guilty conscience.

“David, since you’re already an Almighty, you must be prepared to contribute to your homeland. Even if it can’t change anything, it’s also what you should do,”

Blaze said solemnly.

“Don’t worry, Blaze. Just tell me as long as you need me, and I will never say no,” David replied seriously.

“Very good. Come with me then. I’ll take you to see the other comrade-in-arms.

They are looking over us so we can live here peacefully. While we're at it, I'll tell you about this universe."