

Chapter 722 Liam's Uncle's Objection

In the main hall of the Hoffman family's house.

It was not until Julie was feeling much better that Liam took her to officially present her to Sergio and the elders of the family.

The meeting in itself was quite formal and special. All the direct descendants of the Hoffman family were present, with Sergio sitting at the head.

They were all invited here not only because Liam cared about Julie a lot, but also because he was going to officially announce his desire to marry Julie in front of the whole family.

With Julie's hand tightly clasped in his, Liam nodded politely at everyone and looked directly at Sergio.

"Grandpa, this is the real Julie, your future granddaughter-in-law, and the one I'm going to marry. This time it's for real."

After he spoke, Julie slowly took off her veil, revealing her scar-covered face. Honestly, it was a little scary at first glance.

Liam glanced briefly at her and continued, "Grandpa, Julie and I have reached an agreement. We want our wedding to be held without any outsiders present."

On the central seat, Sergio frowned and observed Julie from her head to her feet.

He wasn't one to judge someone by their appearance. However, Julie being his granddaughter-in-law meant she would also be the wife of the future leader of the Hoffman family. It would be a disgrace to the family if her appearance didn't change.

Apart from that, Sergio had heard about what happened in the dungeon a few days ago. He was told every single sordid detail of how Julie tortured and killed Vivian.

He had to admit that this type of temperament didn't exactly reassure him.

However, he couldn't say this to his grandson.

So, he gave it another moment of thought and asked calmly, "Liam, have you really made up your mind to marry her?"

Liam's nod came just as soon.

Sergio sighed heavily and said, "In that case, I can't stand against it. I'll go with whatever you decide to do."

That said, Sergio moved his gaze to Julie and said, "Julie, we will try to heal the scars on your face."

Julie nodded vigorously and without wasting a second.

She was relieved and happy that they got Sergio's approval. With a broad smile on her face, she leaned on Liam's shoulder.

Liam's expression also showed how happy he was. He looked at the other elders present and said solemnly, "Then we shall do this according to the rules and etiquette of our family."

Of course, Liam was referring to the rules applicable to the marriage of the heir to the Hoffman family.

According to the rules put in place by the Hoffman family, the members of the Hoffman family only needed the approval of the head of the clan for their marriages to go on. But being the heir to the Hoffman family, the rules that applied to Liam were different.

The marriage of the heir to the Hoffman family was of great importance. He not only needed to win his grandfather's approval, but also had to have the acceptance of the other elders.

Till now, this rule had always just been a formality.

The elders didn't exactly have the qualifications to make the final decision. They just had to know the concerned in advance. The final decision always rested on the shoulders of the head of the clan.

This time though, something unexpected happened.

Liam's uncle, Demetrius Hoffman, abruptly stood up and said firmly, "No, I'm against this! Liam is one day going to be the head of the Hoffman family. Him taking an ugly mute for a wife will make our clan an laughing stock."
