

Chapter 738 Fighting Against Rohan Again

Fear was evident on Rennes' face. He was deeply intimidated by Liam's newfound power. "What... What do you want to do?" Rennes stammered.

"What do I want to do? Humph!" Liam retorted coldly. With a swift motion, he knocked Rennes out, leaving the Sandovals' residence with Rennes slung over his shoulder.

By the time Rennes regained consciousness, cold water dripping down his face, he was in a graveyard on the outskirts of Invone.

Before him stood Annie's tombstone.

"Pay your respects. Kneel," Liam ordered icily.

Collecting himself, Rennes replied with a scoff, "All this for her? You think I'd bow to this bitch? Dream on."

Liam's aura grew menacing when he heard Annie being insulted.

"Remember, my brother has defeated you. If you harm me, your entire pathetic Hoffman family will pay."

Unfazed, Liam shot back, "Where's Rohan?"

With a smirk, Rennes replied, "He's at the villa by West Lake in Invone. See if you've got the nerve to confront him. Prove you're not as weak as I think."

Liam's lips curled into a cold smile. "Rest assured, I'll find him. He'll meet the same fate you're about to."

With that, Liam delivered a series of swift kicks, rendering each of Rennes' limbs useless.

Ah!!

Rennes let out a piercing scream. In an instant, Liam seized him by the head with a single hand. Ruthlessly, Liam brought Rennes' face down to Annie's tombstone, slamming it repeatedly into the cold, hard ground.

The stone quickly became stained with crimson. The pain was so intense that Rennes lost consciousness.

Liam then hauled the unconscious Rennes down the mountainside. At its base, members of the Dark Night Organization were stationed, awaiting their arrival.

Following the directions Rennes had shared, Liam and his crew headed directly for the lakeside villa.

This residence was a known base for the Duncan family, and Rennes had been truthful. His motive was straightforward. He believed that Liam was no match for Rohan.

By provoking Liam into seeking revenge on Rohan,
Rennes hoped to secure his own salvation.

Yet the situation did not unfold as Rennes had anticipated. While the villa was indeed heavily guarded by Duncan family's soldiers, Rohan was nowhere to be found.

Liam ruthlessly killed every last guard from the inside out, but still, Rohan remained elusive.

As this played out, Rennes regained his senses. Increasing dread painted his features.

Turning around, Liam glared at Rennes, demanding, "You promised Rohan was here. Where is he? You deceived me? You're playing with fire."

Cornered, Rennes could only retort defiantly, "Just be patient. My brother will be here soon. You can meet your end then."

Liam's gaze grew colder as he approached Rennes, his intent clear. "Perhaps you should meet your end first."

As Liam readied his strike, a voice interrupted, "Someone's seeking me, I hear?"

Liam's eyes darted up to find Rohan making his entrance.

There was something different about Rohan this time.

Liam could distinctly notice a greenish tint on Rohan's skin, and his form seemed off. It had an uncanny likeness to those previously altered by the mysterious doctor.

More than that, the aura Rohan exuded now was palpably more intense than any altered individual's.

Confidently, Rohan sneered at Liam, his tone dripping with derision. "Liam, always the fool. Our grandfather and that man, Felix, went to great lengths to spare your life. And yet, here you are, so easily lured back to your doom."
