

Chapter 758 The Narrow Escape

Exploiting the weakened firepower suppression, Liam's team successfully breached the Duncan family's defense line and rescued the immobilized Liam.

With determination etched on his face, Riel reassured Liam in a resolute tone, "Don't worry, even if we have to fight to the death, we'll get you out of here."

Seeing his comrades-in-arms risking their lives alongside him, Liam was deeply moved and tears welled up in his eyes.

Despite having the option to flee upon receiving the news, they willingly jeopardized their lives to save Liam.

Nevertheless, the situation was grim. The entire Hoffman family had been defeated, and the disoriented enemies were regrouping in response to the sudden assault.

Riel and his group, although formidable, couldn't face Rohan.

Seeing no further reinforcements arriving, Rohan smirked with relief and taunted, "Sometimes, I genuinely admire your audacity. You dared to come here, tempting fate without any reinforcements. Wouldn't it be better to just live?"

Aikin replied coldly, "Taking our lives won't be that simple."

Despite their hurried arrival, they had made some preparations. They wasted no time fighting against Rohan. They brandished their firearms and initiated an exchange of gunfire.

Fiona shielded Liam and retreated. Aikin and Riel, rather than engaging with the Duncan family, used their superior equipment and strength to buy time for Liam's escape with their lives.

"Fiona, I entrust Liam to you," Riel asserted with determination.

In the next moment, Tyson was equipped with explosives all over his body and charged into the midst of the enemy.

Boom!

A massive explosion prevented the Duncan family from pursuing further.

With a stern expression, Rohan ordered his men, "Break through this group. Don't let Liam escape!"

However, Riel and the others, who had resolved to meet their demise, proved challenging to overcome. High-spirited and determined, Aikin strapped a bomb to himself and shouted, "Remember to avenge us!"

Boom!

Another explosion rocked the battlefield.

Amidst the self-sacrificing efforts of her comrades, Fiona managed to escort Liam safely out of the Hoffman family's residence with tears in her eyes.

Inside the Hoffman family's residence, over a dozen members of Aikin's team had been eliminated, leaving Riel to confront Rohan's army alone.

"Liam, see you in the next life!" Riel exclaimed, suddenly breaking into laughter.

With those words, Riel charged out with explosives strapped to his body, his target not the Duncan family's forces, but the gate of the Hoffman family's residence.

Rohan instantly grasped Riel's intent and shouted in horror, "He intends to blow up the exit. Stop him!"

Before Rohan could complete his sentence, Riel had reached the door.

Boom!

Fiona drove a pre-arranged pickup truck, tears streaming down her face.

Behind them, explosions continued to resonate, each representing the loss of a friend of Liam.

Liam's eyes brimmed with tears. He used all his remaining strength to sob.

Liam had never endured such a tragic and desperate situation. Looking through the window, he could hardly bear to witness the devastation of his loyal men. Hatred filled his heart.

The sacrifices of everyone finally provided a slender chance for Liam's survival. Under Liam's direction, Fiona swiftly drove them to Cloud Harbor.

The Duncan family's pursuing troops remained hot on Liam's heels. They would not easily let him go. Rohan knew better than anyone that he had to eliminate Liam.

As long as Liam lived, Rohan's peace of mind would remain elusive. Rohan did not want Liam to potentially return in the future.

Since it wasn't the peak season, only one cruise ship was in the harbor.

Fiona carried Liam and rushed to the ship's captain. She said anxiously, "One hundred million dollars. We'll rent this ship and depart immediately."

The captain's eyes lit up at the exorbitant sum and promptly ordered the crew to weigh anchor and leave the shore.

When they reached the middle of the sea, the captain asked with a fawning smile, "I haven't asked where you'd like to go."

Liam, weak and weary, responded casually, "As long as we can leave Invone, you can take the ship wherever you please."

The ship's captain blinked and suggested, "Sir, if it's agreeable to you, we could head for Fermagh. I'm quite familiar with that route, as I often sail it."

Liam looked up at Fiona. Fiona nodded and said, "Alright, it's your call."

The captain beamed and said, "Very well, I won't disturb you two. Please, have some rest."

Subsequently, the captain instructed his crew to escort Liam and Fiona to their cabin for some rest.

By this time, the Duncan family's forces had just arrived at the harbor. Rohan's face twisted with anger. He ordered his men to ready a ship, but it was too late.

Upon the Duncan family's yacht's arrival at the harbor, the cruise ship had disappeared over the horizon for an hour, leaving the vast sea to conceal their whereabouts.

Rohan's countenance darkened. All he could do was let Liam escape.
