Annie smiled and answered, "I invited them over. The wedding photos should be shown during the wedding dinner, but since you and Uncle Jeremy took the photos after the wedding dinner, I thought I'd ask everyone over to look at them together. I mean, wouldn't it be a shame if no one was able to admire the wedding photos?"

Corinne frowned. It was not her intention to take wedding photos; Annie was the one who dragged her into taking them. In the end, Corinne thought it would be nice to have a memento of her wedding, but she did not think that this would happen.

Zeke, who was sitting on the sofa, waved lazily at them. "Jeremy, why are you and Corinne always the latest to the party? Drink this gla** of beer as punishment."

Jeremy walked over and sat on an armchair. "That's 'cause I'm not as free as you."

Zeke simply shrugged. "Fair enough. I'm single, after all."

Gerald pa**ed Jeremy a gla** of beer. "I hope you don't mind, but Annie only has beer in the house."

Jeremy waved his hand. "I'm driving, so I'll pa**."

After that, the four men chatted among themselves.

Annie pulled Corinne over to where she was sitting. "Let's look at your wedding photo. I must say I was stunned by how beautiful you looked in your wedding dress! The staff at the photo studio kept telling me how beautiful you were when I went to pick up the photos. They even asked whether it's possible to use your photos as promotional material, but I turned them down. I know you and Uncle Jeremy value your privacy very much."

She pa**ed Corinne a thick photo album as she praised her.

Corinne put the photo album in her lap and felt a little touched when she looked at the photos of her and Jeremy kissing and hugging. 'The photo studio Annie recommended is not that bad at all. The photos are amazing.'

Jeremy wore a suit prepared by the studio, which made him look younger than his age. Thus, it did not seem like he was much older than Corinne. Frankly, Jeremy was very good-looking, and his skin was so flawless that it became the envy of many women. However, due to his status, he had to make himself look older than he was by combing his hair back and wearing only formal suits.

He did not look like he was 30 years old every time he came out of the shower with his hair down. In fact, it would not be a reach to say he could pass off as a college student if he dressed in T-shirts and jeans. Corinne looked at the photos in a daze. Seeing this, Jeremy became interested as well. "Hey, little rascal. Let me have a look, too."

Corinne snapped out of her daze and passed him the photo album. Jeremy flipped through the pages, and slowly, his eyes narrowed. This was the first time he had ever taken so many photos in one go. In fact, there were not many photos of him growing up.

Annie moved closer to Jeremy and asked slyly, "Corinne looks so gorgeous in her wedding dress, doesn't she, Uncle Jeremy?"

Jeremy looked quietly at Corinne and said lightly, "She looks okay. If I must say, she's not that photogenic."

Corinne frowned when she heard that.

"Uncle Jeremy! How can you say that? Don't you know how many men will kill to have a beautiful wife like Corinne? Tsk, tsk! You shouldn't take her for granted," scolded Annie.

Zeke chuckled lightly. "What he means is, Corinne looks good in the photo but not as good as she looks in real life. Right, Jeremy?"
