

Chapter 509 It Is Fake!

As Lenard was daydreaming happily, Trevor smiled faintly.

This whole time, he was on guard against the other members of the Sanderson family. Therefore, he had been observing him carefully.

Looking back now, when Lenard handed the vase to Trevor, he looked a little cautious.

Judging by the way the owner of the antique shop and Lenard were acting, Trevor quickly guessed the purpose of them.

Smirking slightly, Trevor thought to himself, 'Do they think of me as a fool?'

If they did, they were perfectly wrong!

A sneer appeared on Trevor's face.

Even though Trevor really didn't know much about these antiques, there was someone who was an expert in that field.

At that time, Trevor quietly asked Tasha about the vase through a text message.

At first, Tasha had no interest in these ordinary antiques. Hearing the sound of cracking, she raised her head.

Once she saw the blue and white porcelain in Trevor's hand, she realized that it was fake and quickly replied Trevor in the message.

When he got the answer, Trevor felt relieved and told Tasha not to reveal about it for the time being.

Since the other party wanted to trick him, Trevor would let him taste the bitter fruit he had sown!

Seeing that Trevor was using his phone, Lenard and the shop owner thought that he was raising money.

Not knowing what was waiting for them, the two of them couldn't hold back their smiles.

An idea flashed in Trevor's mind. He raised his head and said, "Well, since I broke it, I should compensate you for it. But how do I know if this vase is really worth eight million dollars or not? I mean I know nothing about antiques. Can I call someone to identify it?"

Hearing this, the boss became anxious. After all, he had no idea who Trevor would call.

However, if the vase was inspected by an expert, they would definitely be exposed.

In a hurry, he waved his hand dismissively and said, "Mr. Trevor Sanderson, you don't have to doubt it. I will show you the auction certificate and the value identification certificate of this vase. Those documents are official certificates and they can be verified on the Internet."

The truth was, these two certificates were real while the vase was fake. The real vase was hidden in the safe in the room.

The owner was using the documents to dismiss Trevor's doubts.

At that time, Lenard butted into the conversation, "Trevor, don't make things difficult. We can just check the certificates here."

However, what Lenard didn't know was that his behavior only made Trevor believe that there was something wrong with the blue and white porcelain vase.

Trevor held up his hand and said indifferently, "But certificates can be faked too. Isn't it safer to find someone to identify it?"

As his plan was going to be ruined, the boss quickly promised, "That will be too troublesome. How will I dare to lie to you, Mr. Sanderson? I will pay you ten times the original price of it if it is fake! I promise!"

Now that the boss had fallen into his trap, Trevor smiled and thought, 'Well, that's exactly what I'm waiting for!'

At that time, Trevor pointed at Tasha and said with a smile, "Actually, it's not troublesome at all. Let me introduce to you. This is Tasha Byrd. She is the granddaughter of the famous antique collector, Toby Byrd. I want her to evaluate the value of the blue and white porcelain vase. I'm sure that she won't make a mistake."

Seeing that Trevor was pointing at the girl he felt familiar with just now, the boss's heart sank. Immediately, cold sweat started to form on his forehead.

Of course, with the reputation of the Byrd family in the collection circle, it wasn't difficult for her to find out that the vase was fake.

A smile appeared on Tasha's face. She didn't expect that Trevor would be able to trick the owner to say something like 'I'll pay you ten times the original price of it if it was fake'.

What a smart boy!

Tasha gently tapped her fingers on the table and gestured for Trevor to put the blue and white porcelain vase on it. Pointing the crack in front of her, she said professionally, "From the crack of this blue and white porcelain, we can see that a rough mold was used and the workmanship is poor. Plus, the color of the body is unnatural. It is just a trick to fool an outsider! Also, I can easily find another three reasons to prove that it is fake! Do you want me to list them one by one?"
