

Chapter 914 Discover The Bronze Beast Statues

"It's impossible!"

Nola was exasperated. She couldn't believe that she had lost to Trevor.

The unruly character she had developed over the years made her turn around and punch and kick Britton.

"Why don't you say something? Didn't you say I would win? Hurry, look for the warehouse. Have you bought any treasures? Take them out. You're an experienced treasure hunter, right?"

Britton was so embarrassed that he stood still, letting Nola scream and hit him. He accepted all her punches and kicks, not daring to fight back or even dodge.

He didn't expect that an outsider would defeat him.

There was a gold Buddha statue in the charred wood of the warehouse, and it was too inconceivable. He had never seen such a thing for many years.

When Trevor saw how furious Nola was, he shook his head and said coldly, "If you want to go crazy, no problem. But do it only after you fulfill your promise."

Nola's expression froze upon hearing this. And her anger seemed to freeze on her face too. She gritted her teeth and clenched the hem of her dress tightly.

Anger and embarrassment gradually surged up in her heart. She thought she was sure to win, so she had casually promised to fulfill any condition Trevor would put forward. But when the result came out, she started to panic.

Nola couldn't help wondering if Trevor coveted her beauty. And if he had an improper desire for her, should she refuse? She was lost in thought for a moment.

When Trevor saw Nola's blushing face, he knew she was thinking the wrong way.

"Take me to the warehouse Isaias rented. I want to see the items he has stored there. And tell me what items he took away today."

"What did you say?" Nola was stunned for a moment as she couldn't believe her ears. Was Trevor's request that simple?

"Do I need to repeat what I said? Didn't you hear me clearly just now?" Trevor asked lightly.

"No need. Let's go," Nola muttered. She turned around and walked ahead, hinting at Trevor to follow her to the warehouse. As they walked, she said, "I don't know what Isaias has taken with him. I'm not interested in it."

She thought for a while and added, "Isaias didn't come to pick it up in person. He sent a driver here and took away several seemingly heavy lockboxes. And he said that the rest of the items will be left for me."

Trevor's interest was piqued when he heard her mention lockboxes.

His heart skipped a beat, feeling that he was getting closer and closer to the core of his enemy's conspiracy.

At this moment, they arrived at a small warehouse.

As soon as the door opened, Trevor couldn't help squinting his eyes.

The bronze beast-head statues!

The warehouse was full of bronze statues without eyeballs. They faced the door with hollow eyes, looking very gloomy and appalling. And there were no lights in the warehouse, so the atmosphere was a little weird and horrible.

Trevor stared at the bronze statues for a while, touched his chin, and said, "Okay. Let Willis stay and help me take these things away. You can leave if you have nothing else to do."

Nola's eyes widened, and she felt like her breathing stagnated.

Trevor's request was very simple, but it caused a strange feeling in her heart.

She had thought Trevor wanted to take advantage of her, but she was wrong.

She wondered if he thought she was not as good as these antiques.

Nola had always been flattered by everyone since she was a child, and she thought she was incomparably beautiful.

Today, she had given Trevor a chance to take advantage of her. Unexpectedly, he didn't have such a thought at all.

Nola couldn't stand the humiliation, so she said sarcastically, "Humph! You are really into money. You're only interested in these antiques. You are even more useless than Isaias."
