

Chapter 910 Suspicious Endurance

Trevor already had what he wanted, so picking a fight with Isaias was just an act.

And now that he had easily defeated Isaias, there was no reason for Trevor to stay.

Trevor left the atrium and went to his father, Ronald.

In one of the rooms in the castle, they sat face to face with serious expressions.

Trevor told Ronald about his recent conflict with Isaias.

Ronald sat in silence for a while before saying, "There are only two days left before the family gathering. I wonder what Rudolph is planning. We should investigate the Art Street as soon as possible and try to find something useful to prevent our enemy from making any drastic moves."

Trevor nodded in agreement.

At that moment, someone knocked on the door.

"Are you in there, Trevor? It's me, Rudolph."

Rudolph!

What was he doing here? Had he heard their conversation?

For a moment, Trevor felt nervous. His heart started to race.

Rudolph was not like Isaias. He was cunning and vicious so Trevor had to be careful.

Ronald glanced at Trevor reassuringly and called out, "Come in."

The door opened with a gentle swing.

Rudolph stood at the door with an apologetic look. He was followed by Isaias, whose face was black and blue.

Rudolph bowed to Ronald and Trevor in an elegant manner and said, "I'm sorry to bother you, Ronald and Trevor. I just learned that there was a misunderstanding between these two young men. I'm sorry for not disciplining Isaias well enough. I hope you can forgive him."

After saying that, he pulled Isaias forward and demanded, "Apologize, Isaias!"

Trevor's eyes narrowed slightly.

It would have been easier for Trevor to deal with the situation if Rudolph came here spoiling for a fight.

However, Rudolph looked way too calm and even forced his son to apologize.

Unbelievable!

Rudolph was actually enduring such an embarrassing situation. This probably meant that he had a bigger plan!

At first, Isaias looked a little reluctant.

However, when his father sent him a cold glance, he shuddered and quickly lowered his head.

"I'm sorry, Trevor. I acted too impulsively. I'm very sorry for offending you. Please don't take it to heart."

His apology seemed sincere enough, and his attitude lost all signs of dissatisfaction.

After hearing this, Trevor waved his hand dismissively.

Rudolph was more concerning than Isaias and his brash personality.

After Isaias and Rudolph left, Trevor realized that his palms were a little damp with sweat.

Being in the presence of such a cunning and vicious man like Rudolph made him nervous.

"What do you think, Trevor?" Ronald asked as he frowned at the closed door.

Trevor shook his head and replied, "There must be something bigger brewing since Rudolph treated this incident quite lightly. This feels more like the calm before the storm. But I think Isaias is so afraid of his father that he hasn't told Rudolph of his slip-up. Maybe it's our chance!"

Ronald nodded and patted Trevor's shoulder.

"I'll tell Bradley to come to Zayden. Tomorrow, let's go look around the Art Street. I hope we can find something useful!"
