

Chapter 938 Stay

Trevor was in deep thought. He wondered if he should stay or not.

If he stayed, would Pearce teach him strong fighting skills? But if he left, where could he go?

Trevor was in a dilemma. He was quite conflicted about deciding.

Of course, he was eager to take revenge. But if he wasn't a match for those men in black, everything would only be his wishful thinking.

Trevor gritted his teeth as he made up his mind. He looked at Pearce and said, "Yes, I'm willing to stay. Please take me in as your disciple."

In the end, he chose to stay.

Judging from the current situation, the Sanderson family had not sent anyone to arrest him here. This only proved that Pearce supported Elwood.

Trevor also trusted his grandfather's judgment.

So there must be a reason why Elwood had a serious talk with him at the castle.

with him at the castle.

Pearce smiled and took a sip of his tea leisurely. Then he called out, "Gladys."

Gladys opened the wooden door again and poked her head into the room curiously. "Yes, Grandpa?"

Pearce looked at Trevor and said leisurely, "Find a bedroom for Trevor. From now on, he will do chores here."

Gladys was so surprised that she couldn't help raising her eyebrows. She looked at Trevor curiously.

She was well aware that this was the test given by Pearce to everyone who wanted to learn from him.

Over the years, only a few people qualified for the test.

"Come with me." Gladys turned around and walked ahead to lead the way, her red dress swaying with her every step.

The room Trevor would be staying in was small and in poor condition. It was very simple and crude, with only a bed, a table, and a chair inside.

But Trevor didn't mind at all. Before he became the heir of the Sanderson family, he also lived a poor life. So this simple room was acceptable to him.

Gladys brought some daily necessities for him.

"My name is Gladys Martinez. If you need anything, don't hesitate to come to me. I will try my best to help you. By the way, since you will be working here, your food and accommodation are free. But we don't offer a salary."

Trevor nodded without saying anything. Actually, he didn't care about the salary.

There was only one thing he wanted, and that was to learn powerful combat skills.

Gladys was a little surprised that Trevor remained indifferent after she mentioned the salary. She couldn't help looking at him again.

After explaining some details about his work, she turned around and left.

The next day, Trevor woke up early in the morning and started cleaning up according to Gladys' arrangements.

The area of Pearce Martial Arts School was not small, and its architectural style was similar to that of ancient temples, so cleaning required a lot of hard work.

It was already nine o'clock in the morning, but Trevor had just finished a small part of the cleaning work. By this time, Delgado had arrived.

"You?"

Delgado exclaimed in shock. He didn't expect to meet Trevor again.

Trevor just glanced at Delgado indifferently, then looked away.

He was clear about his purpose in coming here. And that was to learn powerful combat skills. Therefore, he didn't want to get involved in anything irrelevant.

He knew that Delgado was an arrogant and mischievous person. And he didn't want to waste his time on Delgado.

Trevor's indifferent attitude angered Delgado. He couldn't stand being ignored by Trevor, so he shouted angrily, "Stop! How dare you sneak in to get close to Gladys! You are shameless. Do you think you can impress her by doing some cleaning work here? Don't be delusional. She won't be interested in someone like you."

Trevor still ignored Delgado. He even walked to the other side of the yard with a broom in his hand.

Delgado became even more furious. He glared at Trevor's back and said fiercely, "I already warned you yesterday not to get close to Gladys. It seems that you just turned a deaf ear to me. Don't you take me seriously at all? Fine! Since you ignored my kind warning, I must let you know the consequences of disobeying me here."

After saying this, he clenched his fists tightly and was about to step forward. But out of the corner of his eye, he caught a glimpse of the exercise equipment on the side. He suddenly changed his mind as he thought of something.

Delgado stared at Trevor's back with a sinister smile.

He thought that the best way to make Trevor suffer was to make Trevor a sparring partner.

If he let his disciples fight with Trevor and hurt him, it wouldn't harm his reputation.
