

Chapter 793 Fatherly Resolve

Julie was taken aback to witness the severe beating Ruben had received from those people.

Ruben, previously known for his arrogance and reckless behavior, had now met an unfortunate fate.

She didn't care about the individuals Ruben might have offended. In fact, she felt a slight sense of satisfaction within her.

At least, this way, Liam wouldn't have to engage in conflicts with them anymore.

Observing the scene, Julie said to Liam and Yesenia, "Let's go, Mom, Liam. There's nothing for us to see here."

At that moment, looking at those people, Liam furrowed his brows slightly. He sensed a vague connection to their presence. It wasn't until Julie held his hand that he snapped out of it and smiled.

Taking Julie's hand, he replied, "Sure, let's go."

Annoyed, Yesenia reluctantly followed Julie and Liam, grumbling, "Well, looks like the engagement party won't happen now. All because of you, a jinx."

While she didn't explicitly any name, the term 'jinx' was obviously directed at Liam.

Liam harbored no fondness for Yesenia. Hearing her words, his frown deepened, and he felt a twinge of anger.

Unaware of Liam's change in expression, Yesenia persisted, "Julie, you can't marry this troublemaker. Otherwise, we'll have nothing but misfortune ahead."

Obviously, she didn't associate the black-clad men with Liam.

Observing Yesenia's increasingly offensive remarks, Julie intervened sharply and scolded, "Mother, that's enough. This isn't your concern!"

After that, she turned to Liam and apologized, "Sorry, Liam. Don't mind my mother's words. She tends to act like this."

Given Julie's assurance, Liam chose to ignore Yesenia's comments for the moment. The trio soon exited the hotel, and Liam got into Julie's car.

At the villas in western outskirts.

Julie resided there temporarily, with a prominent plaque reading 'Cortez Mansion' at its center.

Though Julie and Yesenia didn't live in luxury, they resided in the villa district and enjoyed a comfortable life.

However, Liam was surprised by the plaque.

Five years ago, he had destroyed the Cortez family. Yet now, it appeared a new and seemingly influential Cortez family had emerged.

Nonetheless, Liam wasn't in the frame of mind to delve into this matter. His sole focus was to see his son as soon as possible.

Only when they arrived home did Yesenia finally lose her composure. "You've hidden away for years. Now that you can't survive on your own, and you see Julie is living well. Do you intend to come back to rely on her?"

Liam's expression darkened suddenly.

Noticing her mother's outburst, Julie rebuked, "Mom, what are you saying? Liam is Asher's father. Don't speak nonsense. It's not good for Asher to hear this!"

At the mention of his son's name, Liam regained his composure. Despite his anger, he didn't lose his temper. He simply disregarded Yesenia.

Liam eagerly asked, "Where's Asher? I want to see him."

Five years ago, he had seen Asher only once, just after his birth. Since then, they hadn't met. Now, finally getting the chance to reunite with his son, Liam felt both excitement and guilt.

After all, he had neglected his responsibilities as a father for so long. He was now determined to make
