In the Pearl Company's hallway, upon Julie and Yesenia's rushed arrival, the atmosphere was chaotic, with Casper seated nonchalantly on the sofa in the center.

Upon noticing their approach, he showed no intention of rising, his gaze turning icier.

Donning a composed demeanor, Yesenia promptly approached him and pleaded, "Casper, why this hostility? We're family. There's no need for such cruelty. Let's discuss this, shall we?"

Casper scoffed, his tone dripping with disdain. "I don't consider you family. I merely show respect because you're my aunt. You're just a pitiful widow, unable to find companionship for years. My dog's in heat, perhaps it can fulfill your needs."

Casper's degrading words left Yesenia stunned.

She was rendered speechless by his lack of respect and filthy remarks.

Julie, infuriated, stepped in front of Yesenia. "What's your game, Casper?"

With a wicked grin, Casper taunted, "Aren't you bold? How dare you cause a scene in my house! Today, you'll pay for it. I'll ruin your family."

In a cold tone, Julie asked, "Casper, must you be so heartless? If you stop this recklessness, we can still coexist peacefully."

Upon hearing this, Casper scoffed and abruptly stood, leering at Julie suggestively. "Well, sleep with me, record it, and send the video to your useless husband, and I'll cease troubling you. Impress me, and I might even arrange an extra loan from the bank for you. What do you say?"

Enraged, Julie clenched her fists, trembling with anger. "Shame on you! We're cousins! How could you suggest such filth? I'd never stoop to those indecent acts with you!"

Unfazed, Casper laughed and said, "Then brace yourself for your company's downfall."

As Casper prepared to leave, sudden car honks outside drew everyone's attention.

Turning, they saw eight luxury cars, each valued at over a million dollars, parked in the square.

Suited business elites emerged from the cars, walking into the hall.

Julie, Casper, and the rest were shocked and puzzled by their unexpected presence.

The business elites entered the hall, and the chief among them asked loudly, "Who here is Julie?"

Confused, Julie raised her hand and said, "I'm Julie. How Upon hearing Julie's acknowledgment, the man retrieved a photo from his pocket. Confirming its accuracy, his demeanor swiftly transformed, exuding a profound level of respect.

Hastening to Julie, he introduced himself. "Pleasure to meet you. I'm Aidan Torres, assistant to the president of Joy International Media. Your company's design concepts have caught our attention. We're here to discuss potential cooperation."

This revelation surprised everyone present.

Moments ago, Pearl Company faced bankruptcy, yet now, a remarkable turnaround unfolded.

Despite Joy International Media's recent establishment in Salem, no one underestimated its significance.

It was a bona fide global enterprise with its main headquarters established in Snape and an extensive network of branches worldwide. The recent establishment of its Salem branch marked a new development, showcasing significant wealth comparable to the historical affluence of the four prominent families in the region.

However, noticing Julie's hesitation to respond, Aidan appeared somewhat anxious. Hastily, he pressed on, "Our company is fully equipped to promote and market your company's products. Additionally, the funds you acquire can be utilized as a priority for expanding your factory.

These details are outlined in the contract, so you can be assured of our commitment."

Subsequently, Aidan retrieved a contract from his briefcase and courteously extended it to Julie.
