

Chapter 812 A New House

Once those words were uttered, the entire sales office was left astounded.

The villa Nolan was offering, even if sold at a reduced price, would still hold a value of no less than eight hundred million in the market. Giving away such an enormous amount of wealth to the young man in front of him was truly surprising.

However, Liam's subsequent actions shocked everyone even more. He promptly declined and said, "There's no need for a gift. I don't accept undeserved rewards. Let's proceed with a regular transaction."

Standing beside Liam, Julie trembled slightly. Confronted with the gifted villa, she couldn't deny feeling tempted, yet she also comprehended the broader perspective. She refrained from taking charge of the situation regarding Liam.

Recent events, however, subtly hinted to Julie that Liam might indeed have the means to acquire this villa.

In the face of Liam's refusal, Nolan's face briefly revealed a hint of disappointment, though his disappointment wasn't profound.

He understood that someone of Liam's standing wouldn't be easily persuaded, and being too insistent could have adverse effects.

With this in mind, Nolan altered his approach and turned to Julie, smiling. "Please don't misunderstand. I've heard that Miss Fiber's company is on the brink of collaborating with Joy International Media. The potential for the future is significant. How about we consider the money of the house as my investment? The two companies can foster greater collaboration in the future."

Upon hearing this, Liam gave Nolan a meaningful look, already having a rough understanding of the situation.

How could Nolan, who suddenly appeared, be so well-informed about detailed information of Julie?

Considering the broader scenario, Liam comprehended that Nolan must be aware of his identity, hence the amiable demeanor.

However, despite having an agenda, Liam couldn't feel any resentment towards Nolan's approach and genuine intentions.

Observing this situation, Liam turned to Julie beside him and said, "Julie, since he wants to collaborate with you, you make the decision."

After thoughtful consideration, Julie nodded and proposed, "Given the sincerity shown, I won't decline. How about exchanging forty percent of Pearl Company's shares for this valuable villa?"

On hearing this, Nolan cautiously glanced at Liam, concerned about potentially taking too much of the shares and causing displeasure.

Seeing Liam's unchanged expression, Nolan nodded and agreed, "Alright, let's proceed with that."

Once the specifics were settled, Nolan promptly assigned his team to manage the property transfer procedures. During the wait, he courteously invited Julie and Liam to the VIP lounge and served them his cherished black tea.

Amidst casual conversation, Nolan discovered that Liam and Julie were purchasing the villa for their son's education.

Understanding their intent, Nolan assured them, "Mr. Hoffman, Miss Fiber, rest assured. I will personally oversee matters with Hawthorn Kindergarten, and you need not worry about enrollment."

Julie expressed her gratitude and said, "Thank you so much, Mr. Murray."

Nolan waved it off. "It's nothing."

Just then, a salesperson entered and said, "Mr. Murray, Mr. Hoffman, the property transfer procedures are completed."

Liam nodded, turning to Julie. "Now that the transfer is done, shall we go and see the house?"

Julie nodded. Despite Nolan's wish to join them, Liam firmly declined. Nolan had no alternative but to instruct his subordinates to drive Liam and Julie to Nightingale Villa Area Number One.

They were welcomed by a grand European-style mansion nestled amidst picturesque mountains and water, offering fresh and delightful air.

Inside, the décor was simple yet elegant, boasting top-quality marble floors and steps made of white jade. The spacious interior showcased various artworks by renowned artists.

Julie couldn't believe she would be living in such a villa.

She was both amazed and puzzled, feeling that acquiring the villa was too easy, and it seemed it was because of Liam but not entirely.

Nevertheless, they had a new home now. Julie was brimming with joy.
