

The Princess and the Pauper (Arabella)

Chapter 979

Chapter 979

Louisa's words over the phone had already made Carol feel the disparity between her and Crystal.

Clark could feel the soft touch of the girl's fingers. His lips lightly touched her hand, causing Carol to blush and instinctively pull away.

Dennis noticed that scene only to fuel his anger. How dare he take advantage of his sister at a time like this?

"Do you have a girlfriend? Since when? How come you've never mentioned it?" Louisa was shocked.

He had been dating for a year but never told his family. Dennis was even more angry.

Why?

Why didn't he tell the family?

"Was she the same age as you? What does her family do? Does mom know them? Was she the daughter of a wealthy family?"

Before Louisa could finish her questions, Clark noticed a change in Carol's mood and quickly interrupted, "In any case, stop giving Crystal any hope on your end. As for me, I'll find time to clear things up with her."

Louisa wanted to ask more about his girlfriend, but he had already hastily hung up.

Strange. When did her son get a girlfriend? Why hadn't she heard anything?

Was it a recent relationship?

Downstairs, Crystal was filled with anticipation. Seeing Louisa come down, her eyes sparkled even more.

"Crystal, this is a dress I bought for you. I'm not sure if it fits. I wanted to see you try it on, but I have to run an errand for your uncle, so I can't stay to entertain you." Louisa lied.

"That's okay, Auntie. Thank you for buying me so many beautiful clothes. I'll go home and try them on, then send you a video. I won't stay to bother you."

Crystal politely excused herself, not forgetting to thank Louisa for her kindness.

Louisa watched her leave, wondering what kind of girlfriend Clark fell in love with. It would be heartbreaking for Crystal when she found out.

At Mystic Oak House, Dennis looked at Clark with a cold expression. Carol quickly said, "Brother, you should rest first. I'm tired and want to go to sleep."

"I'm asking you,' Dennis's gaze was fixed on Clark as if trying to see through him, "In the past year or so, have you been in contact with the heiress of the Temple family? Does she often visit your house? Are you close? Have you never mentioned Carol to your family?"

"Brother, I told you to rest first? Carol's eyes were warning. She didn't want her brother to interfere.

But Dennis was angry, "This guy says he loves you, cares about you, looks for you everywhere, but he's keeping a backup."

What's more, the backup has already gained the approval of his family. His family must think the backup was better than Diana.

"Brother, you misunderstood."

Before Clark could explain, Dennis was already angry, "I just heard clearly.

Your family doesn't know anything about your girlfriend!"

They had been dating for a year, but he had never told his family, so they were still trying to set him up with someone else.

The servants outside noticed that something was wrong and hurried to find Arabella.
