

The Princess and the Pauper (Arabella)

Chapter 997

Chapter 997

That Molly, so useless and foolish, with a lowly background. Serena heard Molly was even kicked out of her house, living a life of hardship.

The most crucial point: she's Arabella's best friend!

If she became the sister-in-law, who knew what kind of mischief she'll stir up behind the scenes.

"If by some chance I become your sister-in-law, I'll make sure you benefit."

Rachel said, all the while clinging to Serena's arm coquettishly.

"Serena, I want to be your sister-in-law too. As long as you make that happen, I'll repay you however you want!" Another woman was pestering Serena, hoping she'd help set them up.

"Serena, I'm not picky. You have five brothers. If any of them is single, I'm up for it!"

Looking at the ten or so pleading faces before her, Serena offered a light smile.

"Alright, I can't decide who my brother's date. How about this? I'll find an opportunity to invite all of you over to my house. Who they end up with will depend on your skills."

The crowd was instantly overjoyed, showering Serena with praises.

"Serena, you're the best friend I've ever had. I love you so much."

"You're like a deity to me. If this works out, I'll worship you for the rest of my life"

"Serena, you're so kind, so understanding."

On the surface, Serena smiled, but deep down, she had no idea if this would work. After all, she knew her brothers' personalities all too well.

Finding them suitable partners seemed like an impossible task.

Just then, Arabella, leading her own team, was walking towards them.

She was an absolute sight for sore eyes. Her natural radiance and the "straight-A student" aura around her made her the center of attention the moment she appeared.

"Look, the straight-A student is here! Oh my God, she's even prettier in person. I finally get to see her today."

"Westerly College is letting a freshman lead the team this year?"

"What's so strange about that? Arabella is the only student they can be proud of at Westerly College. Of course, they'd let her appear at such an event."

"Indeed, no one else is more capable of leading the team than her. I just wonder if she'll compete."

"What? If the straight-A student competes, what will she choose? If it's the same as mine, I'll quit immediately" Someone sounded disheartened.

"Can't you have a little ambition? Just because she's academically gifted doesn't mean she's equally talented in other areas!"

"Yeah, that makes sense."

Seeing Arabella surrounded by people walking in her direction, Serena felt a bit uncomfortable. What was she doing here?