

Arabella 1703

Chapter 1703

Timothy had said before, that the girl had the voice of an angel, a name as melodious as her voice, strikingly beauty, and can handle a car like she was born to race.

Could he be talking about his fiancée?

Except for his fiancée, in his twenty-something years of life, he couldn't recall meeting another girl who was so stunning. Every single trait Timothy mentioned matched his fiancée to the letter.

So, he's got the hots for Bella?

Was it the surprise and unconcealed disappointment in Timothy's face that gave it away? Because he knew that Bella was his fiancée?

No wonder Timothy had downed half a cup of iced coffee earlier to calm his nerves after finding out who Bella was.

"How long have you been eyeing my fiancée?" Romeo suddenly narrowed his eyes and asked, "Trying to make a move on my girl, huh?"

"What are you talking about?" Timothy was caught off-guard by his sharp observation and forced a laugh, "I mean, sure, she is stunning, one of a kind, and drives like a pro."

"How do you know about her driving skills?" Romeo zeroed in on that detail with a dangerous glint in his eye, "You've seen her drive?"

So, her friend was the captain of Light Fleet?

His Bella stepped in for her injured friend?

The rest of the Light Fleet didn't step up, they let his Bella take the wheel; that alone speaks volumes about her capabilities.

"Was the race dangerous?" Romeo continued to ask.

"It wouldn't be quite right to call the race dangerous. After all, there was a huge gap in their skills; but your fiancée was nothing short of remarkable. She appeared out of nowhere and won two races back-to-back. If only you had seen her commanding performance."

Upon finishing his words, Timothy realized he was revealing too much and sealed his lips.

Romeo's watched him with a veiled threat in his eyes, "So that's the moment you fell for her?"

That night, before the video call with Bella, Timothy did indeed call him to say he fancied a girl who was amazing behind the wheel, and shared his own passion.

Could it have been his fiancée all along?

"You fancy Bella? She agreed to meet you for coffee today?"
