

Arabella 1724

Chapter 1724

Martha lashed out at Horace with a vicious crack of her whip, "Think you're going to get away with this? Somebody grab him and beat him!"

Two burly men immediately grabbed Horace's chair, ready to drag him away.

"Let go of me, you sons of bitches. Touch my boss and I swear I'll haunt you to your graves."

"What's the point of going after Horace? Even if he ends up unrecognizable, it won't help you vent your anger. Come at me instead. Whatever you plan for him, I'll take it on his behalf."

"You're protective of your pup." Martha hadn't expected that even now, at this critical moment, Arabella wouldn't show a hint of fear. Clearly, she was toughened by life's rough and tumble; her mental fortitude was just different.

"Now, what shall I do first? Ruin that pretty face of yours or chop off those talented hands?"

Martha pinched Arabella's chin and was taken aback to find her skin so smooth and soft.

She remembered applying a facial mask to Serena, and even with all the pampering and care Serena had received from childhood, her skin couldn't hold a candle to Arabella's.

porcelain, so flawless that it could slash it up, would Romeo still fancy you, you freak? Your hands, able to play the piano, to paint, to heal—what if I pulled out her phone to send a video before the person on the other

this is?" Martha held

"Martha,

It was Arabella.

Martha had kidnapped Arabella.

her voice and made sure all doors and windows were shut. For good measure, she drew the curtains and found a corner to watch from, shocked yet

It was Arabella.

Really Arabella.

brought a whole crew

amidst her glee, Serena was worried, "Martha, if our family know. Once I scar her face, chop off her limbs, and throw her from the 18th floor. and then cut her piece by piece, grind it up, and pour it down the drain. the Arabella noticed that she talked a lot, going on and on about things that were of no use.

"But what if." Serena feared being discovered. Not to mention the affection and importance the Collins family placed on Arabella, and the power of her brothers—if one day it came out. she and Martha would be doomed!

"No one knows she's here, and no one knows what she's going through. Serena, watch closely how I take revenge for you!"

With that, Martha viciously slapped Arabella.

The sharp, crisp sound sent Serena's heart racing, and she couldn't help but cover her mouth to stifle any noise.

Martha had slapped Arabella.

She really slapped her.

At that moment, Arabella was like a prisoner at the mercy of her captor, utterly powerless to resist.

Arabella was kidnapped!