

Chapter 318

Chapter 318 Avalanche

"B*tch, I treated you well, but you humiliated me!"

Sam became crazy. And his distorted face was full of ruthlessness when he said. "I agreed to escort you, but you are not grateful. You asked the captain whether you had any other choice without hesitation! Why do you look down on me?"

I desperately struggled, constantly beat him, and tried to pry open his fingers around my neck. But he was much stronger than me

Fear, anger, and despair wildly grew inside me, but an unprecedented desire to survive also exploded. While struggling, I somehow got some strength and hit his lower body hard with my knee

He instantly howled in pain and let go of my neck. As soon as the cold and dry air scrambled into my lungs through my nose, I coughed so violently that tears flowed out of my eyes

Hearing his dirty curses, I was so scared that I ignored the discomfort and struggled up from the ground. Then, I grabbed the alpenstock and probe rod and hit him hard

He angrily roared, "B*tch, f*ck you!"

I underestimated his explosiveness. The "fatal blow" just now didn't make him feel so painful that he rolled on the ground. Instead, he grabbed the probe rod and pulled it in his direction. I failed to let go in time, so I lost my balance and fell to the ground again.

He got up from the ground and jumped at me

"You're dead meat!"

He was like a ferocious polar bear straying into the Antarctic. If I did not escape, he would bite off my neck and kill me in the place close to my parents

At this critical moment, I quickly rolled to avoid his attack

Click!

When he failed to hit me, we both heard the crisp sound of something breaking!

I didn't dare to move but quickly turned to look in his direction. Sure enough, a conspicuous crack appeared on the ice between us!

The platform we were on was a protruding rock halfway up the snow mountain. Because of the long-term snow accumulation, a flat ice surface was formed on it. But now, the ice couldn't bear the weight of us and began to crack in the form of spider webs.

My mind went blank, and I was at a loss for what to do.

Sam's sudden laughter caught my attention. He was not scared but became even more arrogant. When he jumped at me, I heard the crisp sound again. I could no longer fight back the fear, so I screamed.

Lying on the ice, I felt the vibration and then the weightlessness. But such feeling soon disappeared when Sam grabbed my mountaineering bag

The ice under me fell with the rocks. So my body was suspended in the air

I desperately grabbed the straps of the bag and looked up at Sam standing on the edge of the broken ice. He was tightly grabbing my bag with both hands but showing a victorious smile

"B*tch, if I let go, you will die."

He wildly laughed, "Your life is in my hands now. Do you want to die or live? I will only give you one chance to choose."

I had a mental breakdown. I could not understand his words. But I knew I did not want to die!

The wind in Antarctica was strong, so my body was constantly swaying in the air. I could not keep my balance and wanted to grab his hands. But the distance made me too scared to reach out.

"Don't let go! Please!"

I uncontrollably burst into tears, raised my head, and begged him in a trembling voice, "I will do whatever you want me to do! Please pull me up!"

"Will you sleep with me?"

"Why are you still thinking about such things now?" I screamed

Boom!

Although my body was swaying in the air, I felt a strong vibration.

What happened?

When Sam and I looked up, we were both shocked

A terrifying white thing was sliding toward us from the top of the mountain! It was an avalanche!

I had never thought I would die young. Even when I had been sent to the hospital after breaking up with Aaron four years ago, I had not thought I would have anything to do with death. But now, death was close to me!

Sam turned pale. When he lowered his head to look at me, his face was cold.

The fear of death enveloped me

"Help me!"

Before I could finish my words, he ruthlessly and rationally shook my bag.

I instantly felt a sharp pain in my arms as if having a dislocation. It was so painful that I could not continue grabbing the straps. As soon as letting go, I slipped out and fell

"Ah!"

I wildly screamed and fell heavily on a cliff.

Despite the thick snow as a buffer, everything had happened too fast. When feeling the piercing pain in my legs, I uncontrollably rolled, losing my direction.

My leg must have broken! My head spun dizzily, and my mind went blank. I lost all my memories in the snow but recalling the familiar voice had said, "If you encounter an avalanche, immediately pull the air bag trigger. It is on the right shoulder"

Right shoulder. Where was it?

I groped my shoulders tremblingly, found something during the rotation and collision, and pulled it hard.

It worked! The strong buffer slowed me down.

When the conspicuous orange air bag quickly inflated, I had a sense of security! I would not die! It was wonderful!

However, as soon as I raised my head after my body stopped, a terrifying force like a torrent instantly buried me.

What was despair?

I had thought this word had no specific definition. But now, it had a specific image in my mind.

After avoiding being raped, I fell off the snow mountain. When I had thought I would survive, I encountered an Chapter 318 Avalanche avalanche. Sam had robbed me of my mountaineering bag. There were many tools for wild survival in it, including the avalanche signal transceiver

Even if I survived, the rescue team would only find him. And I would slowly die in the freezing snow mountain

I felt severe pain in every inch of my bones as if being run over by a truck. I was caught in the snow and couldn't do anything to save myself. Human beings were insignificant in front of nature.

I was dying
