Chapter 751

The air seemed to turn warmer, and they could almost hear each other's heartbeats in the silence.

Cordy had no idea why her heart started beating faster.

Wasn't she just taking care of a patient?

Wasn't he just a patient with a slightly better physique?

She tried her best not to let her bare hands come into contact with Lucas' body.

After wiping his torso, she went on to wipe his legs.

After a long while, Cordy was finally done.

She looked up and saw Lucas' face which was slightly flushed.

Right from the start, she focused on her hand movements and put aside all distractions. She did not expect to see the embarrassed look on Lucas' face as he laid down and let her wipe him down.

Cordy was stunned for a moment.

Was he pretending to be innocent or...

"It's nothing, really. Go back to sleep," Lucas said, slightly annoyed.

But if one were to listen closely, he sounded rather breathless.

Cordy did not want to care about him, but Lucas was injured after all. If anything was wrong with him physically... What was more, he was stubborn and would refuse to admit it.

Lucas did not notice what Cordy was doing, so when Cordy appeared by his bedside, he was so shocked he almost leaped from his bed. "Cordy, are you pretending to be a ghost?! Why are you so silent when you walk?"

"Be quiet." Cordy was rendered speechless by how uptight Lucas was being.

Richard was sleeping; of course she had to be silent.

"What are you doing here at my bedside? Go back to sleep on your own bed," Lucas instructed.

Cordy ignored him.

She stared at his flushed face and could hear his rapid, shallow breathing. There was clearly something wrong with him.

"Do you feel hot?" Cordy asked.

The world turned quiet, with everyone staring agape at Lucas...

And then...

Utter embarrassment!

Things became extremely awkward in the room.

"Return me my sheets!" Lucas said through gritted teeth.

Cordy immediately did so.

Lucas covered himself angrily, pulling the sheets over his head.

"That is... very normal," the doctor said, trying to ease the tension in the room.

Cordy's face blushed.

"Why is everyone still standing around here?!" Lucas yelled through the sheets.

The doctor immediately snapped back to reality. "It's fine. We'll leave right away."

"Hurry up!" Lucas rushed them unceremoniously.

Although he did lose his memory three years ago, his past life and his life as he knew it now completely corresponded to each other. There was no reason for him to doubt it.

He turned to the other side.

He flipped and flopped on the bed, unable to fall asleep.

Richard’s words suddenly surfaced in his mind again, asking him if he was afraid of not knowing how to deal with his emotions right now.

Lucas buried himself under the sheets again.

He realized that he was indeed struggling with it!

He must stop thinking about this.

He was sure he would be possessed at the rate he was overthinking.

Meanwhile, Cordy could sense that the person next to her in the room was on the brink of collapse.

Not wanting to reject him at the expense of her own health, Cordy accepted Lucas' shirt.

To be honest, it had been a while since she had a good night's sleep.

The smell on Lucas' clothes and pillow that was left in her house had gradually faded, and the quality of her sleep deteriorated along with it. 1

Before Cordy settled herself down for bed, she took a closer look at Lucas' shirt.

Perhaps due to her designer's instinct, she wanted to see what shirt could make Lucas care so much about it.

However, just one look was enough for Cordy to recognise it.

She was, of course, familiar with her own works.

This shirt was from high-end luxury under Starstream Group, a limited-edited piece across the globe.

Although this brand belonged to Starstream Group, it was not marketed under the name of the company and thus, its brand direction differed from other brands of the company. That was why many people did not know that the brand belonged to Starstream Group.

"Shall I give Maron a call to prove to you what I said is true?" Cordy deliberately offered.

"No! I'm tired!" Lucas struggled to turn around with his back facing Cordy.

Cordy smiled.

'Weak.'

The night was finally silent, and everyone fell asleep until the sun rose.

Cordy did not know if it was because she had not had a good sleep for too long or because of Lucas' shirt, but she slept very soundly through the night.

She did not even wake up when a medical staff member came for his rounds.

Richard, on the other hand, woke up very early.

He got out of bed quietly and even reminded the medical staff member to be quiet lest they woke his mommy up.

Nana stood stunned for a moment before replying, "He's a college classmate whom I got to know from abroad. But because his family is also in the capital just like mine is, we exchanged contact details even though we weren't exactly close."

"Does he know me?" Lucas asked another question.

"He often sees the photos I post on social media." Nana got angrier as she explained. "Lucas, why are you questioning me when I'm supposed to be the one angry at you for not informing me about your accident? Why didn't you take the initiative to tell me about it? If my classmate didn't tell me about it, would you have hidden it from me forever?"

"I've already explained things to you. I didn't want to cause you worry in the middle of the night. What's more, I won't be able to hide it from you. I need at least half a year for my leg to fully recover. I can't possibly hide from you for half a year, can I?"

"Were you even thinking of doing that?!" Nana's face turned red with fury.

"I wasn't," Lucas said in a gentle voice. "It's not a big deal, so I didn't want you going to all that trouble in the middle of the night."

"I'll forgive you this time, but don't do it again," Nana said in all seriousness. "Next time, no matter the time, you must inform me immediately if something happens."

"I will."

"Did the doctor tell you when you can be discharged?" Nana continued pestering Lucas.

A tinge of anger could be heard from her voice.

It was understandable-any woman would get angry under such circumstances.

Cordy glanced at Lucas, who then said, "Last night, I went to the hotel and bumped into Cordy.

Coincidentally, a motorcycle went out of control at the hotel entrance and drove straight into the hotel.

I stood in front of Cordy and Dicky and got injured. Cordy sent me to the hospital as a way of thanking me."

"Why does she need to be with you in the ward?" Nana questioned. It's enough for her to send you to the hospital. Why does she need to stay with you the entire night?"

"I was the one who wanted to stay. It has nothing to do with my mommy," Richard suddenly spoke up.

Nana turned to look at him.

"I just thought that Lucas might feel lonely being alone in the hospital with no one familiar, so I insisted on staying back. My mommy was worried about me staying in the hospital by myself, so she decided to stay along with me," Richard explained.

"It's exactly as Dicky said." Cordy echoed Richard's explanation. "Now that you're here, Dicky and I can leave."

"To be even more direct, if you hadn't told me to keep my distance from Lucas, I wouldn't have left last night and the accident last night wouldn't have happened!" Cordy said slightly harshly. On one hand, she was not very happy to be misunderstood that way, while on the other, she really did not want to deal with Nana anymore.

"How smart." Nana's smile turned colder. "You even managed to push all the blame to me! Cordy Sachs, I can really see why you're like a fish in water in the business circle.'

"Forget it if you don't believe me." Cordy did not want to explain any further.

She had said everything she could.

Cordy held Richard's hand and left.

Nana ran ahead and blocked Cordy's way, and Cordy furrowed her brows.

"Cordy Sachs, I said earlier that there are many women who fancy Lucas. Out of so many women, none of them succeeded in seducing Lucas. Do you really think Lucas is so composed and disinterested in other women? No, it's because of me," Nana said coldly.

"I'm not interested to know about both of your affairs.'

"No one can snatch Lucas away from me!" Nana said emphatically, "No matter how beautiful and adept you are at seducing men, you'll never beat me!"

Cordy stared at Nana.

"Nana kept accusing me of seducing you..."

"I didn't. I just, I just hope that the two of you can stay away from one another. Lucas, you also promised to keep your distance from her, but last night...I really find it difficult to accept, which is why I came looking for Cordy to thrash things out," Nana said indignantly.

"Let's put it this way: I am seducing you. All those accidental and planned meetings between us were all my doing. Last night's accident was also something I planned. Dicky asking to stay behind was also something I'd deliberately told him to say." Cordy decided to go all out and pretend to be the bad guy.

Why would she bother trying to be the good guy?

It was tough and never ended well for her.

Perhaps being thoroughly wicked was the way to go.

People would always tend to shun bad guys too.

Cordy's words made Richard furrow his brows.

He did not really like hearing her say that of herself, but he knew that it was rude for children to interrupt when adults were talking.
