Usually, surgeries for the eardrums had to be scheduled way in advance. However, because the hospital was concerned Landon might actually demolish it, they arranged for Lauren's surgery to be done immediately the morning after.

Landon hadn't slept a wink or had a bite since the night before, and Angelina followed suit.

Angelina had stayed loyal to Landon for ten years, the only woman in his life for so long that had never been swapped or replaced.

Angelina would always be by his side when a female companion was needed for whatever events he attended.

Some people would come and compliment her for her looks and how well they looked together, but well." Landon would only chuckle and say, "I see you're a man of culture as Angelina knew very well that nothing beyond their current relationship would ever be possible and never hoped for such.

She was privy to his habits by now and knew his boundaries when it came to other women.

They could fool around and sleep together, but there would be no talk of marriage. Even if he did marry, he would have ended up with multiple wives like Winston Taylor,

Yet things were entirely different now. This was the first time Landon had treated a woman like he treated Lauren, as far as Angelina knew anyway.

Sir.

the surgery

will take some time for sure. Why don't you sit and rest your legs?" she asked gently.

"I don't need rest." Landon stared fixedly at the surgery room door, anxious like nothing else.

"It's just a minor surgery with barely any failure rate. I don't think it should be that worryi-"

"How could I not worry? What if Lauren's hearing worsens? What if she gets side effects from this? What if she goes deaf once she grows old?" Landon roared,

At this rate, Lauren might need a hearing aid, Angelina thought as she winced.

"Betty should fucking go to hell!" Landon roared again, punching the hospital wall. "I'm not going to let her off that fucking easy, even if Lauren's ear heals! I'm going to snap every one of her fingers in half!"

Gathering her courage, Angelina asked, "May I ask you a question, Mr. Harper?"

"What?"

"Do Do you have feelings for Ms. Lauren?"

Landon's heart fell into his stomach and back up, pounding furiously in his chest.

His breathing quickened into something uncontrollable.

Did he have feelings for Lauren?

Did he?

His feelings for Lauren had gone beyond the point of using his friendship with Jasper as an excuse to keep her safe.

But she was still Sophia Kirkman's daughter.

Even if Landon truly adored how sweet and innocent Lauren was, making a never-before-seen tenderness and protectiveness arise in him, that one fact was enough to keep an uncrossable gap between him and

Lauren

"I do, Angelina, but I can't act on it beyond this." Landon leaned against the wall, palms flat against it. His knuckles were bruised red from the punch he'd struck earlier-as were his eyes.

'Is it because she's Sophia Kirkman's daughter?" Angelina asked.

Landon's voice was hoarse when he answered, "Yes."

"But if you truly like her, then you should try and work things out together."

Angelina really wanted her boss to be with Lauren. She was such an endearing girl.

Angelina continued, "If you were in a relationship with Ms. Lauren, you'd literally save her from a life of suffering. Betty Beckett wouldn't dare do anything to her sister anymore."

“As if she dares to now.” Landon’s eyes darkened.

“But wouldn’t you feel much more secure with Ms. Lauren by your side all the time? Think about it-if Ms.

Lauren became your wife, that’d be the greatest slap in Betty’s face.

“She wouldn’t even dare come near Ms. Lauren anymore. Because if she did, she’d be waging war against all of us. You wouldn’t even need to tell me before I cut her tongue out!” Angelina explained.

She was this close to calling Lauren “Madam

He cursed, pondering when they would finally have the chance to be together.

“But did you ever consider what it would mean for both our families if I married Lauren? Our families would be allied. Think about what would happen to our footing in the city,” Landon said slowly, turning around to face Angelina.

He was strangely reasonable as he continued, “I still have Preston to worry about, and I have no full control of the family business yet. Jasper’s situation in his family isn’t very stable either.

“If I married Sophia’s daughter right now, what would Jasper think of me? That power-hungry uncle of a man would take advantage and take full control alongside Sophia. I might even drag Jasper down in the process!”

“But sir

“I will never forget how my father died, Angelina.” Landon sank into a nearby bench, clasping his head as if he were having a migraine.

Landon continued, "I will never forget how distraught my mother was the night news of my father's death reached her how she stood outside in the rain the entire night, crying....

"I'll never forget how, during my father's funeral, my own uncle Preston grinned in the corner like some my way of that!"

Angelina knelt before her boss, gently caressing his quivering back.

"I'm going to take back everything that belonged to my father, Angelina, I can't afford to make any mistakes before that happens!"

Alyssa arrived at KS World Hotel for work in the morning and to do the final check-up on the birthday celebration venue for Lyla. She'd just returned to her office when Jasper called her.

"Yes, Mr. Beckett?" she asked flatly, as if whatever happened last night didn't.

"Lyse," Jasper murmured.

"Who's Lyse? There's only Ms. Alyssa Taylor here."

"Has Grandpa called you at any point today?" Jasper asked, making Alyssa tense up

"Grandpa? No, he hasn't. Why? Did something happen to him?"

"Not him, but Lauren."

"Lauren?" Alyssa gasped.

"I didn't go back to Seaview Manor last night. Only when Grandpa called earlier to ask me why Landon had taken Lauren away did I get to know something happened with my family.” There was exhaustion in Jasper’s voice, with a tinge of rage. “I tried calling Landon earlier, but none of the calls went through.”

“He’s done for now!” Alyssa hissed, slamming a hand on the table as she stood up. “I knew that jackass was up to no good when he brought Lauren to that hotel last time, yet you kept defending him! He’s nothing but a sick pervert!”

“Lyse, I grew up with Landon. I know him in and out. He may be fond of women, but he doesn’t just sleep with anyone.” Jasper tried his best to console Alyssa while defending his friend.

Landon continued, “He wouldn’t dare do anything to Lauren. She’s my sister, after all.”

“Like hell! Landon would sleep with anyone who isn’t related to him!” Alyssa yelled. “You’d better get on your knees and pray Landon didn’t so much as touch Lauren, or I’m cutting his fingers off one by one!”

“Alright,” came the calm reply.

Alyssa was taken aback. “What?”

“I said, alright. I agree with your decision. If something did happen, you can get to work on his left hand.

I'll go for the right one."

Alyssa was truly left speechless now.

Hoes before bros, indeed.

Lauren was transferred to a general ward after her surgery. She lay weakly in bed, face as pale as the hospital gown she wore.

"How do you feel? Does it still hurt?" Landon asked tenderly, gazing into her doe-like eyes.

Lauren shook her head meekly.

"Can you hear me then?"

Lauren nodded.

Landon sighed long and hard. "Thank goodness."

He then took out his phone. "I'll call your brother and sister-in-law to have them come pick you up

"Bring it over."

She set it down on the meal tray above the hospital bed, where Landon opened it up. He blew carefully on a spoonful of cream of mushroom soup before bringing it to Lauren's lips.

"Here, eat up."

Angelina had to look again to make sure she wasn't hallucinating.

There was no point hiding what one truly felt for another, as it would manifest in other ways no matter what.

"I... I can eat on my own..." Lauren mumbled, blushing,

"You're still weak from the surgery. Let me help you." Landon pressed the spoon to her lips again, smirking lightly as he teased, "You should be feeling blessed right now. Do you have any idea how many women in Solana City would die for me to be doing this for them?"

Lauren said nothing. She merely obediently swallowed the soup.

"There we go! You can go brag to the world about how I've personally fed you. Come on, open up."

From beside them came Angelica's sudden snort of laughter.

Landon was really trying his hardest to take care of Lauren. None of his techniques applicable to other women worked for Lauren, so he had no choice but to try something new.

It was fun to watch.

Meanwhile, Lauren eagerly savored the soup Landon served her. Her motivation wasn't to boast about the experience but to ease Landon's burden. She just didn't want him to strain his arm by repeatedly lifting the spoon to her lips.

Landon's eyes narrowed happily the more Lauren ate.

"Slow down now. Don't choke yourself." He gently patted her back.

sa

When he noticed a drop of white at the corner of Lauren's lips, his breathing hitched inexplicably as surge of heat washed through him.

It was a drop of soup, nothing more.

Landon cursed at himself as he pondered the last time he had taken someone to bed. How could soup make his mind go south that quickly?

"This is tasty. I want more, Landon," Lauren exclaimed happily.

"Okay," Landon said hoarsely.

The ward door was suddenly slammed open, followed by a shriek, "How dare you, Landon Harper?"

Frightened, Lauren dove into Landon's arms, wrapping hers around him. Lauren's action made him realize just how important he was to her.

"Don't worry. It's just your sister-in-law and your brother," he murmured.

Jasper and Alyssa had already marched into the room by now. They were both shocked to their core when they saw Landon and Lauren's positions

"You! Keep your hands off of her!" Alyssa cried, her heart nearly bursting out from her chest when she saw how close the two were.

"Huh?" Landon blurted out, instinctively holding onto Lauren in a protective stance.

Alyssa was nearly seething with rage and visibly upset.

It had been 12 hours. Could someone like Landon resist helping himself for such a prolonged duration?

Alyssa could never believe Landon could. There was no way in hell that he could!

Jasper's expression was dark and frigid as he demanded, "What is going on? Why is Lauren here?"

"What happened to your ear, Lauren?" Alyssa suddenly asked, keen eyes noticing Lauren's bandaged ear. She hurried to the bedside, asking Landon, "What happened to her?"

Jasper walked over to Alyssa's side, just as worried.

Landon grimaced. Could they have a little more faith in him?

He gently rubbed Lauren's trembling back, saying slowly, "Lauren just came out of surgery. I'll tell you all about it later."

Alyssa narrowed her eyes, dropping the matter for now, "Grandpa intends to have Lauren live with him in Crescent Bay, so she'll be staying with him from now on."

"Really? That's wonderful news! Laurie's finally escaped that hellhole!" Landon cried happily.

Jasper noticed how frightened his sister looked and immediately realized something. His lips stretched into a thin line.

“No! I’m not going!” Lauren yelled all of a sudden. “I want to stay with Landon!”

Looks of shock flitted across Landon, Jasper, and Alyssa’s faces.

Landon, especially, stared fixedly at the young woman in his arms as a sudden thought surfaced in his mind.

He wanted to bring Lauren home with him.

So, so much.

Alyssa was unbelievably shocked. “Lauren, you... want to...

“Landon...” Lauren mumbled, nuzzling into Landon’s chest and making his heart skip. “I want to go home with you.”

Alyssa and Jasper had no choice but to respect Lauren’s choice under her insistence.

Jasper then had Landon follow him to the smoking area to speak to him.

“What happened to Lauren’s ear, Landon?” Jasper asked, placing a cigarette between his lips and offering his friend another.

“What happened?” Hatred and cold fury flared in Landon’s gaze. “Your spoiled bitch of a sister, Betty, happened!”

“She’s not my sister. I only have one sister and her name is Lauren.” Jasper bristled at the mention of

Betty. “So, Betty hurt Lauren?”

Landon nearly ground his teeth into dust. The cigarette in his hand almost broke in two under his fiercest pinching. “If I did something to Betty, would you retaliate on behalf of your family, Jasper?”

Jasper lit his cigarette and took a long puff. “I’ll pretend you never said that to me.”

His stance was clear as day.

“Thanks, man.” Landon grinned, delighted. He patted Jasper’s shoulder in solidarity.

“But no deaths, for your own good.” Jasper shot him a look.

Jasper continued, “If you really like Lauren and intend to build a future with her, then first make sure to cut off all those women you keep on strings around you-secondly, no more killing. You’re a Harper, not some underworld warlord. I wouldn’t feel safe entrusting Lauren with you otherwise.”

“I only think of Lauren as a sister, Jasper. Nothing more,” Landon hurriedly said, though his heart betrayed

So did his wavering gaze and slightly trembling fingers, which Jasper was privy to.

The latter only responded lightly, "Ignore the feud between Sophia and I. Lauren may be her daughter, but I've never held a grudge against her for that. She's a good girl. I truly hope she finds happiness."

"Jasper... I... Landon choked out hoarsely.

"You may not be the best option for Lauren, but I can tell you're serious and genuine about her."

Jeez, what was with this attitude? Why did Landon feel like he was getting schooled by his future father-in -law?

"Are you lighting that or not?" Jasper asked, reaching out for the cigarette in Landon's hand. "Give it back if you're not. It's my last one."

"I am, I am..." Landon quickly tucked it between his lips. "Say, when did you get so stingy? You're worth billions, yet here you are fussing over a cigarette? No wonder you've only ever made one friend-me."

"I'm trying to quit. I only go through half a pack daily now."

"Why? You're only 30 years old. At this rate, you might as well go vegan."

"Because of Lyse." Warmth and joy flooded Jasper's heart as he thought of her. "She hates it when I smoke. It's hard to quit, but I'm trying my best."

"Tsk. Why didn't you cut Liana out of your life when Alyssa was still married to you then? You know how much she hated that bitch," Landon teased.

Lauren slowly met his gaze. "I don't care what everyone else thinks. I know you're a good person, just like my brother."

Landon's heart pounded, warmth surging through his being. He gently stroked her hair, hand cupping her nape.

Seeing his silence, Lauren asked worriedly, "Would I be troubling you, Landon? Do you not... want to take me home with you?"

How innocent and direct her words were. Lauren had no idea what she was saying in an adult setting.

Landon murmured but suddenly tensed up, eyes widening in shock.

Lauren had wrapped her arms around his neck, leaning so close to him that all he could see was her. She then pressed her lips against his own.

Landon's heart leaped into his throat as he grew rigid with shock.

Lauren closed her eyes lightly and recalled their first kiss. She gently pressed her tongue against his lips,

"Make it up... to me?" Landon could barely think straight at this point.

“I’m not going to just take advantage of your kindness. I thought you liked stuff like that? I can learn to be better at it.”

Landon swallowed harshly, blood boiling in his veins. “Do you have any idea how dangerous it is for you.

“Dangerous?” Lauren asked, meeting his dark gaze.

Landon couldn’t shake the thought that Lauren might be the cause of his downfall.

He slowly leaned in and kissed her again. Lauren shivered as Landon wrapped his arms around her waist, slowly pressing her onto the soft bed.

Alyssa

left the hospital without so much as a word to Jasper. Though he’d left her with an incomplete puzzle, she wasn’t going to grovel for the entire thing.

She’d rather figure it out herself than ask. It was high time she stepped back into her spotlight after what she’d endured for three years.

On the way back to the villa, Sean called her.

“Ms. Alyssa, we were unable to find any information on Jasper directly, but we did find some interesting things pertaining to Justin Beckett.”

“Being Beckett Group’s CEO, it only makes sense that anything personally related to him is entirely off the records. You’re getting smarter, Sean.” Alyssa grinned.

Sean savored the praise and continued, "Justin Beckett was a victim of a kidnap when he was 11 years.

old."

"Kidnap?"

"Yes. But there is virtually no news about this incident on the World Wide Web, not even in the newspapers. The Beckett family must have silenced all potential leaks on this incident.

"If it weren't for the police's records, we'd never have found out about this. If you'd really more about it, miss, you can always ask my father.

to to know

"He was Solana City's Supreme Court judge, after all. He must've heard something about it."

"No need, Sean, You've already done exceedingly well. You can drop the matter for now." Alyssa then hung up the call, sinking into thought.

Sean was on bad terms with most of his family right now, so he couldn't be asking them for help on their behalf for the time being.

Thankfully, Alyssa had some leads now.

She had just reached home when she noticed a man standing outside the gate.

Alyssa narrowed her eyes to see who it was. Her heart dropped upon realizing it was Jasper.

Jasper gazed at her through her windshield, a fond smile on his face.

Alyssa pursed her lips, a bitter wave rising in her chest.

She had to admit Jasper looked extremely fine when he smiled, just like how she used to dream of him.

She had foolishly stayed by his side for three years, giving him things she thought he might appreciate, learning how to cook, all just so he would smile at her for once.

All of it was futile, however.

Yet, here he was now, smiling at her, even admitting he had feelings for her.

But could her injured, pained heart really be healed by this love that had come too late?

Alyssa took a deep breath, exited the car, and walked up to him.

“Lyse...”

“What is this? Highway robbery?” Alyssa snapped, eyes scanning him up and down.

“You left in a hurry from the hospital, so I didn't have a chance to speak to you,” Jasper said gently,

Ignoring her frigidity

“We wouldn't have met there if it didn't concern Lauren's well-being. There's nothing more to say between us.” Alyssa turned and marched straight for the villa gates.

She added, “I'll have someone send over the next batch of medicine for the second stage of your healing. If you want to live a long life, make sure you take them on time.”

“Lyse, wait.” Jasper reached out to hold her hand.

But Alyssa stopped just then. “By the way, do relay a message of mine to Landon. I’m aware of his feelings for Lauren, and I vehemently disagree with it.”

Jasper blinked rapidly, frowning.

unfortunately, I insist on stepping in.”

There was a hint of anger in Alyssa’s tone as she continued, “Right now, the only person who could help Lauren in your family is Grandpa, but you know just as I do what condition he is in right now. He’s getting older, and he may not have the energy to be concerned with Lauren’s affairs too much anymore.

“Lauren’s parents are basically there for show, and so are you. When have you ever come to her aid first thing v when she was in trouble all this time? You clearly have no capability to keep her safe, and she’s Jasper’s heart winced with pain as he slowly balled a hand into a fist.

“That’s why I’m going to care about Lauren. From now on, I’m treating her as my sister and family,” Alyssa said sternly, “And I will never, ever agree to a relationship between her and Landon!”

“Why not?” Jasper asked, taking a step closer to her, meeting her steely gaze.

Misunderstanding his gaze for a challenge, Alyssa scowled, “Why not? Do you not care about your sister’s Jasper was angry now. Not at Alyssa, really. He could empathize with where she was coming from. But he "Landon genuinely likes Lauren. You saw how much she depended on him today, Lyse, how much she wants to be with-

"Is being dependent the same thing as like? Don't forget that Lauren is on the spectrum and has rarely attended a day of school. How could someone like her, who's never been exposed to the real world, know what a relationship between adults is like?" Alyssa exclaimed, her voice echoing in the night air.

"Would you give them one chance, Lyse, if Landon truly likes Lauren?" Jasper was nearly begging by now.

"First of all, you know just how hedonistic a lifestyle Landon has lived all these years with all those women he's slept with.

"I know there's a possibility for him to turn away from those one day and settle down, but Lauren is too incompatible with him..

"She doesn't know how to keep him under control or meet him on equal footing. I can't watch Lauren waste away her youth like this.

"Secondly, do you really think marrying into the Harper family is the right decision for Lauren?" Alyssa asked sternly.

Jasper winced. He and Landon rarely spoke about the latter's family, even though they'd been close friends for so many years.

Jasper knew mentioning the issues in the Harper family would only upset Landon, so he rarely brought it up, though it remained an area of concern for him.

Alyssa continued, "Mrs. Harper is a woman with traditional beliefs. After her husband's unfortunate passing, the hope of the family now lies on Landon's shoulders.

against them?"

Alyssa's eyes were red-rimmed with unshed tears by now.

Jasper gazed longingly at her, a sharp warmth filling his heart alongside guilt and regret.

She was projecting her own suffering and torment from their three years of marriage onto Lauren. This he knew very well.

Alyssa hadn't let go of her pain. She'd only forced it down her throat each time she was reminded of it, behind bitter tears and choked sobs.

Alyssa had nothing more to say any longer. If Jasper insisted on supporting Landon, she would just opt to do things her way.

Just as she was about to leave, Jasper marched up and hugged her from behind, wrapping his arms around her.

"You" Alyssa's breathing hitched in shock.

"I'm so sorry. It was all my fault for upsetting you. I won't bring it up again if it makes you unhappy, I won't

"No." Jasper nuzzled his way into her neck. "I'm not a greedy man, Lyse. But I can never have enough of you. Not with hugging or kissing."

Even his words of confession were so brutally honest. It made Alyssa's heart skip.

Just then, another voice called out from behind them, soft yet stern.

About Can't Win Me Back - Chapter 599

The familiar voice cut through Jasper's heart like a blade.

Alyssa suddenly came back to her senses and tore away from Jasper's grip, as if she'd been caught doing something inappropriate. She shoved Jasper away, making the man stumble backward.

“What are you

you doing here, Mr. Jameson?” Alyssa asked curtly, unable to mask the shock in her eyes.

Jameson bristled with killing intent, shaking just the slightest against the dark background. He shot

Jasper a menacing glare, pushing at his glasses, It disappeared just as swiftly as it came, though not before Jasper picked up on it.

In response, Jasper stirred up the deadliest energy he could muster, nearly snarling at Jameson. He was never one to lose when it came to this, especially not now when he stood before the woman he loved.

Alyssa noticed Jasper's gaze. It looked like he was ready to tear Jameson limb by limb.

Alyssa was perplexed by the animosity displayed. Was it all because Jameson stopped him from taking advantage of her?

How shameless!

“Are you okay, Lyse?” Jameson went over to Alyssa's side, asking kindly, “Do you need any help?”

“No, I’m fine.” Alyssa smiled, making Jasper tremble with envy.

It had been ages since Alyssa smiled at him like that. Yet now it was directed at Jameson Schmidt!

“You don’t look fine.” Jameson stood close by her side, exuding a protective, authoritative presence. He then glanced at Jasper. “Do you need me to do something about him?”

Jameson was behaving as if he was dating Alyssa!

Jasper’s eyes!

red with fury as he clenched his hands into fists. If Alyssa weren’t here, Jasper would have struck him by now.

“No need. His legs are still functioning, so he can leave on his own.” Alyssa didn’t once look at Jasper when she spoke.

“Then... Can you come with me, Lyse?” Jameson asked.

Alyssa’s eyes widened in surprise.

Unable to stifle his rage any longer, Jasper hissed, “Do you have any idea what you’re asking, Jameson “That’s enough,” Alyssa quipped, not wanting things to escalate. She said flatly to Jasper, “Hurry up and

“Lysel

Jasper flinched. His mouth suddenly filled with blood. He held back from spitting it out, however.

Beside them, Jameson's lips curled into a sneer.

The familiar voice cut through Jasper's heart like a blade.

Alyssa suddenly came back to her senses and tore away from Jasper's grip, as if she'd been caught doing something inappropriate. She shoved Jasper away, making the man stumble backward.

"What are you

you doing here, Mr. Jameson?" Alyssa asked curtly, unable to mask the shock in her eyes.

Jameson bristled with killing intent, shaking just the slightest against the dark background. He shot

Jasper a menacing glare, pushing at his glasses, It disappeared just as swiftly as it came, though not before Jasper picked up on it.

In response, Jasper stirred up the deadliest energy he could muster, nearly snarling at Jameson. He was never one to lose when it came to this, especially not now when he stood before the woman he loved.

Alyssa noticed Jasper's gaze. It looked like he was ready to tear Jameson limb by limb.

Alyssa was perplexed by the animosity displayed. Was it all because Jameson stopped him from taking advantage of her?

How shameless!

"Are you okay, Lyse?" Jameson went over to Alyssa's side, asking kindly, "Do you need any help?"

"No, I'm fine." Alyssa smiled, making Jasper tremble with envy.

It had been ages since Alyssa smiled at him like that. Yet now it was directed at Jameson Schmidt!

“You don’t look fine.” Jameson stood close by her side, exuding a protective, authoritative presence. He

Jameson was behaving as if he was dating Alyssa!

Jasper’s eyes!

red with fury as he clenched his hands into fists. If Alyssa weren’t here, Jasper would have struck him by now.

“No need. His legs are still functioning, so he can leave on his own.” Alyssa didn’t once look at Jasper when she spoke.

“Then... Can you come with me, Lyse?” Jameson asked.

Alyssa’s eyes widened in surprise.

Unable to stifle his rage any longer, Jasper hissed, “Do you have any idea what you’re asking, Jameson

“I do. However, I’m afraid some people have no idea what they’re doing.” Jameson stood in front of Alyssa. “Can’t you see how much she hates you? You’re no longer married. I can call the cops on you right now for harassment, Mr. Beckett.”

“That’s enough,” Alyssa quipped, not wanting things to escalate. She said flatly to Jasper, “Hurry up and leave.”

“Lysel

Jasper flinched. His mouth suddenly filled with blood. He held back from spitting it out, however.

Beside them, Jameson’s lips curled into a sneer.
