Chapter 132

Jasper antemly took the yearbook prollered and began skimming through.

The opponent from that night had a similar physique to him. Though he wore a mask, Jasper felt the man was very familiar. They must have met once before.

The understanding of Axel's background was limited. Their military school followed a policy of safeguarding identities and related issues. But now that Jasper knew of his identity as Alice's brother, the clouds were clearing up.

After some time, Jasper leaped up in surprise, staring at the yearbook on his knee. The gesture surprised Xavier, who also jumped slightly at the commollon

"Did you see something, sir?"

Hay him, of all people?" Jasper murmured to himself.

The man he'd hone in had a wide, handsome smile. Below his picture was the name "Axel Whitaker."

"Axel Whitaker Whitaker. No wonder he seemed to know her!" Jasper exclaimed.

He had fond memories of the man. The two were one of the strongest Individuals in the school. Their only worthy opponents were each other, Sadly, Jasper lost contact with Axel after they graduated.

Jasper gazed leverishly at the picture. He was excited that he had uncovered a little more about Alice's mysterious past.

He was unaware of Axel's background. At their military school, they enforced a confidentiality policy for identities and similar concerns. But now that Jasper knew of his identity as Alice's brother, the clouds were clearing up.

Just then, someone knocked on the door.

Xavier went to open it. He was surprised to see who it was outside.

With a lavish-looking goodle bag in hand, Sean smiled at the secretary. "I'm here on Ms. White's instructions to check in on Mr. Beckett. Has he woken up yet?"

"Come in," Jasper called out from inside the room.

Xavier pursed his lips but let Sean step in regardless.

Sean walked inside. He placed the gilt on the table before saying politely. "Looks like Ms. White was right about you, sir. You look ready to be discharged any time soon."

"Are you here alone?" Jasper peeked outside the door briefly, hoping to find that young, delicate woman standing outside.

"I'm afraid Ms. White is still occupied with the hotel management. She has asked me to come on her behalf. As her personal secretary, I would rightly represent her in this Instance."

The first part of the sentence wasn't said as Instructed. But Sean thought it would be appropriate to add in order to hit back at the insolent man before him.

Sure enough, Jasper's face darkened some. "You can take back this meaningless gift. I don't want it."

"Per Ms. White's instructions, if sir doesn't want it, sir is free to dispose of It. Miss has no Intention of retracting gifts she has given," Sean responded flatly.

"Have Alice come see me in person." Jasper stood up, now meeting Sean at full height.

"My apologies, Mr. Beckett, but Ms. White's time is occupied. She won't be able to see you anytime soon. She has given me full authority regarding reimbursing your losses.

"Feel free to state your terms. Ms. White will agree to most things save the illegal kind."

Sean's smile never wavered.

"I want to see her."
