Upon hearing Carsen's revelation, the attendees at the banquet erupted into a cacophony of shock and screams.

Doubts about Liam's identity lingered among the crowd, their disbelief palpable.

After all, they had heard of Liam, a purportedly useless individual who relied on his wife.

How did he suddenly become a five-star general?

Before the dissent could gain momentum, Bowen and Tristan rose from their seats, traversed to the stage, and saluted Liam with unwavering respect.

Their proclamation echoed through the venue. "General Hoffman!"

The two of them were top figures in Salem. Their endorsement carried weight, gradually convincing the skeptical audience.

They finally believed that Liam was that five-star general!

However, not everyone was swayed. Casper, Lenny, and Elian staunchly refused to accept this reality.

Lenny cursed stubbornly, "Bowen must be playing a trick! To think he would go so far as to create a fake five-star general! How dare he! Bowen and Tristan must be aiming for more benefits in Salem with this move. Liam is just a loser! They're using him as a shield! That must be the case!"

Lenny's vehement accusations reverberated through the crowd, sparking immediate discussions and doubts among the attendees.

Previously, Liam was considered a loser. But now, he was referred to as a five-star general, which was hard for many to believe.

Unfazed by the skepticism, Liam sneered and produced his token as tangible proof of his identity.

"Here is the token. If you still have doubts, please continue to ask questions! If you trust me, stay. I will distribute the interests in Salem in the most fair way. Of course, if you lack faith, you're free to leave. But be aware, from now on, I can't promise you a place in Salem!"

What Liam meant was clear. Only his followers could get a share of the pie.

Those who still harbored disrespect for him would face destruction.

As this realization dawned on the attendees, a sense of urgency swept through the banquet hall. The guests scrambled to present Liam with their gifts.

They all shouted, "General Liam, we're with you!"

Casper, Lenny, and Elian remained frozen in place, staring blankly at the scene before them.

The three of them were very unwilling to come to terms with the fact that Liam was the five-star general.

Because they had repeatedly offended Liam many times.

At the same time, Liam's eyes fell on the three of them. He sneered, his piercing eyes brimming with sarcasm and disdain.

"Before a fair division of interests, drive these three bastards out! Lenny, Casper, and Elian aren't entitled to any share! They're not permitted at my banquet!"

All the powerful figures present dared not defy Liam's command, and some even sought to curry favor with him.

"General Liam, I'm quite familiar with their families. Would you like me to ostracize the three families for you?"

"Yes, General Liam. We're experts at it! I've harbored a grudge against the three families for a long time!"

"Yes! Drive them out of Salem!"

Expressions of loyalty to Liam flooded in from the bigwigs. They swiftly reached a unanimous decision regarding the fate of the three families!
