The driver recalled Brandon's instructions to take good care of Janet before he left.

He nodded at Janet and suggested, "I can contact Sean privately and have him arrange for you to visit the hospital through the internal passage."

After thinking for a while, Janet nodded at the driver and added, "Thank you. Please convey to Sean that he mustn't inform Brandon about this."

"Certainly, Mrs. Larson." The driver readily agreed and cooperated. He then took out his mobile phone and called Sean, informing him of all the tasks assigned by Janet.

Upon receiving the news, Sean rushed to the hospital where Mandy was and made all the necessary preparations, patiently awaiting Janet's arrival.

After a while, Janet arrived at the hospital's side entrance with the driver, where Sean had patiently waited.

Upon seeing Janet, Sean greeted her warmly, saying, "Good to see you, Mrs. Larson."

Following his greeting, Sean retrieved the suitcase from the trunk.

After a while, Janet arrived at the hospital's side entrance with the driver, where Sean had patiently waited.

Upon seeing Janet, Sean greeted her warmly, saying, "Good to see you, Mrs. Larson."

Following his greeting, Sean retrieved the suitcase from the trunk.

He had a phone conversation with Brandon, informing him of Janet's actions, and he waited to come to the hospital and make arrangements only after receiving Brandon's approval.

He heard that Brandon had an argument with Janet and she run away from home. ③

Thinking of this, Sean couldn't help but chuckle. Was this a unique way of expressing love?

"Mrs. Larson, I've made all the arrangements at the hospital. You can enter through the side entrance and take the elevator from the underground garage to Ward 708. There are no reporters there," Sean explained. "Do you want me to accompany you there?"

"No, thank you for your help." Afterward, Janet took the suitcase from Sean and was about to leave.

However, a sudden thought struck her, and she turned back to Sean and asked with a serious expression, "You didn't mention to Brandon that I contacted you, did you?"

Sean was taken aback. "Well... No, you made it clear not to inform Mr. Larson. How dare I tell him?" ①

Relieved by Sean's assurance, Janet handed her suitcase to the driver behind her and proceeded into the hospital through the side entrance, accompanied by the driver.

Sean quickly grabbed his phone when he saw Janet leave and dialed Brandon's number.

"Mr. Larson, Mrs. Larson has successfully entered the hospital."

Following Sean's instructions, Janet entered the hospital through the side entrance and took the elevator from the underground garage to the seventh floor, where she located Mandy's ward.

She didn't encounter any reporters on the way.

Standing at the door of Mandy's ward, she took a deep breath, knocked on the door and walked in.

Mandy's mother, Zola, who was sitting in front of the sickbed and taking care of Mandy, turned around and was surprised when she saw Janet enter the room. Her expression changed.

"Why are you here? Leave now! You're not welcome." Zola stood up, preparing to usher Janet out.

Janet offered a sheepish smile and apologized to Zola. "Mrs. Hamilton, I sincerely apologize. I didn't come here to cause trouble. I just wanted to check on Mandy's condition. If you're still upset, I will cover the medical expenses."

Following that, the driver was about to leave to pay for the medical expenses.

Upon witnessing this, Zola rolled her eyes at Janet, sneered, and halted the driver.

"Don't bother. The cost isn't significant. We can manage it. But this time, Mandy's been hurt physically and emotionally because of the poisoning. No amount of money can compensate for that."
