

Chapter 266 Old Friend

New Year's Eve was only two days away. Sabrina had scheduled her photography class for the night before, with the second class set for the following week.

At 7:00 p.m., Sabrina sat in front of the computer on time, launched the software, and entered the live room.

There was someone already in the live room. It was an assistant who was adjusting the equipment.

Glancing at the Facebook group, Sabrina noticed a bustling chat with many students eagerly awaiting the start of the class.

One of the students said, "It's about to start! I'm getting excited! OMG, I'm so fortunate. I saw the class opening details just yesterday. I got the last spot!"

Another commented, "You're lucky! I've been waiting for a long time to take this class. I'll sign up immediately once they announce the next class opening."

Sabrina furrowed her brows, confused.

She signed up a few days ago. According to those comments, the number should have already run out.

Perhaps someone withdrew from the class, freeing up a spot.

"Hello, can everyone hear me?"

Shortly after, a clear and magnetic male voice resonated in the Livestream room.

"Of course!"

"Yes."

"Hello, Blayze!"

"OMG, I'm so excited."

A series of comments quickly filled the screen.

"Can you all see me? Okay, great! Wayne, could you check the list, please? When everyone's here, we'll commence our class."

About a minute later, the assistant confirmed it on the screen. "Everyone is here."

"Alright, let's begin the class now. First, I'd like to say a big hello to everyone and welcome you to my photography class. You should all have access to our course list. For the first class, we'll delve into photography classifications and styles. I'll showcase some outstanding works."

Sabrina listened carefully while taking notes.

Blayze's voice had a gentle and clear tone. His class proved to be both informative and engaging.

Two hours flew by quickly.

"Alright, everyone. That wraps up today's class. Wayne will send out the homework details to the group. Please complete it on time. Thanks, and see you all

Chapter 266 Old Friend
next week."

+120 Points at most

Sabrina turned off the livestream and went back to her bedroom with her laptop.

In bed, Jennie was engrossed in playing games on her phone.

Sabrina lifted the quilt and slipped into bed with her notebook. She reviewed everything she learned from the class.

She picked up her phone and downloaded the homework zip file sent by the assistant.

Once she unzipped the file, ten photos needed to be analyzed using the knowledge she had acquired in today's lesson. In addition, she had to take five photos herself and submit them.

As she was going over the assignment, her phone suddenly buzzed.

Sabrina was surprised to see a new friend request from Blayze.

After checking the group leader's account, she confirmed it was the real Blayze.

Wondering why he sent the friend request, Sabrina accepted it and responded, "Hello."

She was like an obedient student.

Blayze was typing. Moments later, he replied, "Sabrina, we haven't seen each other for a few years. Why are we so estranged from each other?"

As Sabrina read the response, her eyes widened in shock, and she couldn't believe what she just read.

What did he mean?

Did he know her?

Where did he know her from?

After taking a moment to gather her thoughts, Sabrina typed out a message. "I'm sorry, but I don't understand. Do we know each other?"

Blayze replied, "When you first arrived in Philade, you didn't want to live in the dormitory. I helped you find an apartment. Have you forgotten?"

The reply only seemed to confuse her even more.

Was that so?

But she couldn't remember anything from when she was abroad.

"Really? I'm sorry, but I had a car accident before I returned from abroad, and I can't remember anything from that time."

Blayze replied, "Oh wow! I see. That explains why we lost touch. I always wondered what happened. But why did you delete me after you came back?"

Sabrina frowned, puzzlement swirling in her mind.

After regaining consciousness from the car accident, Sabrina lost her memories and exercised caution by not haphazardly removing friends from her social circle.

Could it be that she might have remembered it differently?

Sabrina conveyed her thoughts with an emoji and wrote. "Perhaps I forgot and unintentionally removed you. I'm sincerely sorry. Were you my classmate during my time abroad?"

Blayze typed. "No, I've been in Philade for a few years. During that period, I was the president of a local association. Our paths crossed within the local association group chat."

Sabrina replied, "I see. Thanks for your help and explaining it all to me."

"You already thanked me back then."

Then, he recorded a voice message.

She pressed the play button and heard a pleasant voice, which she recognized from the livestream lesson. "After you removed me, I assumed you disliked me. I didn't want to bother you after you returned home. It surprised me when I saw you enroll in my photography class. Perhaps it was meant to be."

"Thanks for your informative lesson. By the way, when I registered for the course, was the class already full? Did you decide to include me?" Sabrina asked curiously.

Blayze sent another voice message. "Yes. Do you want to learn photography? I'd be more than happy to guide you through the journey."

Sabrina was confused. "I'm already currently enrolled in your photography class."

Blayze replied, "In all my years of teaching, I believe online classes are less efficient than in-person one-on-one lessons. Are you currently in Mathias?"

Sabrina replied, "Yes, I am."

Blayze replied with an offer. "I happen to be in Mathias, too. Perhaps we could arrange a meeting and explore the town, capturing moments through our lenses while I teach you photography along the way?"

The proposition caught Sabrina by surprise.

"Really? That sounds wonderful! Of course, I'd love to. Is it alright if I bring a friend along?"

Blayze was just a stranger to her now because she had no recollection of who he was.

She wanted to be cautious. So she decided to ask Aylin to go with her.

"Yeah, absolutely," responded Blayze promptly.

Sabrina typed, "Okay. Call me when you are free after the New Year."

"You can call me Blayze. Like you used to."

"Auntie, I'd like to come with you too, if that's okay?" Jenny asked, her big, round eyes blinking at Sabrina.

The little girl displayed sharp intellect. She had been attentively listening to Sabrina's conversation.

Startled, Sabrina instinctively locked her screen. She turned around to see Jennie smiling at her with bright eyes.

"It'll all depend on the when we go. Jennie, if you're still in Mathias. I'll gladly bring you along."

Sabrina then unlocked her screen and resumed texting Blayze in a relaxed manner.

"Yippee!" Jennie smiled happily.

Soon, it was the third day that Sabrina and Trevor had made an appointment. It was in the afternoon.

Bettie had returned to her home to enjoy some quality time with her family. Only Sabrina and Jennie were left alone in the apartment.

Sabrina woke up early and enjoyed breakfast with Jennie. Afterward, she decided to visit Wanda before her meeting with Trevor later in the afternoon.

Just before stepping into the living room, Sabrina overheard Wanda saying, "What are you so worried about? Sabrina will take care of Jennie."

A quick retort came from another woman. "She'll just lead Jennie astray. Jennie hasn't been calling me lately. What does she think? I'm going to bring Jennie back right now!"

It was Kira.

