

Serenity was a foodie, so she felt that eating was the most important thing in the world.

No matter how big the deal was, she would have to eat first before discussing it.

Liberty smiled. "I got up late today. If I go back to the company after breakfast, I will be late. So I might as well pack up and go back to the company to eat. After eating, I just have a morning meeting. You should be busy. I want to go back this weekend to spend some time with Sonny."

Serenity hummed.

Liberty packed breakfast, and after returning to the company, she finished the breakfast as quickly as possible before it was time for the meeting.

Then she sent a voice message to Duncan, saying, "I had a dream one night. I always dreamed that a woman whose face I couldn't see came to me and said, You don't want me anymore, and you asked me to leave you."

Duncan, who was undergoing rehabilitation, did not listen to her voice message immediately.

After Liberty sent the voice message, she didn't wait for his reply. The secretary reminded her that it was time for a meeting.

Half an hour later, Duncan paused to rest before retrieving the mobile phone from the wheelchair. Liberty sent him a new WhatsApp message, which he eagerly opened and listened to.

Duncan lost his calm after hearing Liberty's voice message.

He wanted to call Liberty immediately, but he was afraid that she was busy, so he sent a message to her first: Liberty, are you busy?

Liberty never responded after sending the message, indicating to Duncan that she was preoccupied.

Duncan was anxious, but he couldn't disturb Liberty.

He stopped doing rehabilitation, sat back in the wheelchair, and steered it away from the lawn and back to the house.

Ten minutes later, the bodyguard pushed Duncan out of the main room and walked to his car.

Soon, the bodyguard drove away from the Lewis family mansion.

Duncan always had a sullen face, and anyone who saw his expression knew that he was in a bad mood.

When they were approaching Lewis & Co., Duncan suddenly said, "Go to the York Corporation."

The bodyguard responded respectfully, then turned the car around at an intersection, drove to the opposite street, then turned into another street, heading towards the York Corporation.

In less than ten minutes, they arrived at the York Corporation.

Duncan was Zachary's best friend, and the two major groups had in-depth cooperation. As long as Duncan came over, he didn't need to pass the call or make an appointment. At any time, he could take the elevator to the top floor to meet Zachary.

Normally, Duncan would maneuver the wheelchair by himself. Today, he was anxious and asked his bodyguards to push him.

After reaching the top floor and getting out of the elevator, Zachary's secretary came to greet him.

"Mr. Lewis."

Duncan nodded slightly and then asked, "Is Zachary in the office?"

"Mr. Lewis, Mr. York is inside. He already knows that you're coming. You can just knock on the door and go in."

The secretary thought Duncan would come over to continue discussing cooperation with his boss on new projects.

Duncan nodded towards his secretary.

The bodyguard knocked on the door of the president's office for him, and the bodyguard pushed him in as secretary.

Zachary looked up, and when he saw it was him, he lowered his head to review the documents.

Duncan signaled to the bodyguard that he could go out. He stood up from the wheelchair, took two steps, and sat down on the black chair opposite Zachary.

Zachary closed the folder, looked up at Duncan for a minute, and asked, "Duncan, you seem to have something on your mind. What happened? Tell me and see if I can help you?"

Duncan anxiously came to Zachary to find out if Liberty had said anything to Serenity, but when he saw Zachary, he didn't know what to say.