Seeing Townsend recognize his true identity, Liam was shocked.

How had he figured it out?

Liam's distraction led to more of his vulnerabilities being laid bare.

Spotting Liam's absent-mindedness, Townsend's gaze hardened, using all of his force.

With a grunt, he slammed into Liam's chest, sending Liam hurtling backward and crashing into the wall.

The impact left the wall dented, dust thickening the air in the room in Rosefinch Tower.

Seeing Liam sent flying, Julie rushed over, fret etched on her face.

Behind her mask, Maureen's eyes flicked to the wall. Liam wasn't one to act rashly. His agreement with Townsend hinted at a confidence she couldn't ignore.

Townsend, having struck Liam, reclined smugly, a sinister smirk playing on his lips.

"Liam, I've sussed out your game. You can't pull the wool over my eyes. You're too naive to think you can hide your true identity! Imagine if I hadn't held back, reckon you'd stroll into Pleeeyson in one piece? Truth is, I'm the reason you're standing here facing me! I'm giving you a chance to rise, just so I can knock you down hard! Got to make you see the gap between us! So you'll know what true desperation feels like!" he said.

Townsend had already clocked Liam's visit to Pleeeyson, setting up this showdown at Rosefinch Tower.

Marcelo, catching on, wasted no time in kissing up to Townsend and dissing Liam. "Look at this clueless loser! Think your disguise is foolproof? You're no match for Mr. Chapman's keen eye! You're just a joke, daring to cross Mr. Chapman!"

As Marcelo yapped away trying his best to make fun of Liam and flatter Townsend, the dust settled on the top floor, revealing Liam's figure in the corner.

As the dust cleared, they saw him standing tall, untouched. He wasn't injured at all!

Thanks to the shard of Heart of Life, Liam had this crazy resilience, making him untouchable!

Townsend's attack had barely scratched Liam.

Liam, eyeing Townsend and Marcelo, smirked. "You're celebrating too soon! Townsend, you're the loser here!"

With those words, Liam ripped off his human skin mask, swiftly adjusting his stance.

With everyone watching, he shot off like a rocket, sending Townsend reeling at lightning speed!

Townsend staggered but wasn't seriously hurt.

But the smirk on his face vanished, replaced by disbelief. Pointing at Liam, he muttered, "How's this possible? You've blasted past your limits, becoming a sixth-level Primogem Warrior!"
