

Chapter 1819 Escape From Danger

When Alexandra's men spotted him emerging from the secret passage, they instantly rushed to him, on the verge of tears. Before any of them could utter a word, Alexandra waved his hand, indicating for them to keep quiet.

After Alexandra boarded the helicopter with his men, he turned to Brandon. "Why are you still standing there? Get in quickly!"

Brandon and Janet exchanged a glance, then followed them into the helicopter.

The helicopter was airborne in a matter of seconds, leaving behind the disputes and conflicts of the Barton family.

Inside the helicopter, Alexandra sat stupefied while Janet regarded him with concern. She felt that now wasn't the right time to ask him anything.

Noticing her anxiety and worry-filled face, Brandon took her hands in his and comforted her. "Stop worrying. We still have the herbs."

Janet gave a relieved nod, but her worries continued to eat at her from inside.

Brandon followed the direction of her gaze and his eyes landed on Alexandra, whose features were as delicate as a girl's. Suddenly, he became wary.

It seemed that most women liked feminine-looking young male idols these days. Janet had a similar preference too. And apart from the fact that Alexandra hadn't debuted, he possessed all the qualities of a male idol. Moreover, he was a pharmaceutical genius, and his family had just fallen upon hard times, which easily triggered Janet's protective instincts and concern.

Brandon clenched his jaw in resentment the entire journey. However, Janet didn't notice his jealousy at all. Instead, she even specifically instructed someone to give Alexandra something to eat.

Alexandra could also clearly feel Brandon's intense gaze. But he assumed it was because Brandon was worried about him, fearing that his emotions would have a direct impact on the success rate of the herbs' cultivation.

However, he had numerous troubles of his own, and couldn't bring himself to care about Brandon's worries.

The helicopter traveled for a long time, and the tension remained thick in the air until it finally touched down on the helipad at Frank's private hospital.

Unexpectedly, Alexandra, who had been upset the entire flight, cooperated without any fuss after he got off the helicopter. When Brandon gave the herbs to Wren, he even thoughtfully reminded her of the Wren seriously accepted the herbs from Brandon and said, "Don't worry. I will put in all my efforts to successfully manufacture the that can cure Janet quickly. But I need twenty-four hours. You can leave for now."

She then shot Vinson a glance. The two, who were clearly at odds with each other, walked into the lab.

After Wren and Vinson left, Frank approached Alexandra with a friendly demeanor. He extended his hand as he said, "Hello, Mr. Barton. I've heard many things about you. I'm Frank Watson."

Alexandra glanced at him uninterestedly and remained motionless, lost in his own world.

Janet peeked at Brandon before addressing Alexandra awkwardly, "Umm...I have booked a room at the best hotel in Barnes for you. The bodyguards will escort you there to rest."

Alexandra shook his head and said dispiritedly, "The Barton family's men will come after me once they finish dealing with matters there. My brother is most definitely going to murder me."

As soon as he said this, the woman who had accompanied him began sobbing.

She took off her glasses and began weeping noisily, letting out her fear and nervousness. In the middle of her crying spell, she asked Alexandra, "Can we find a place to hide first? Some of the medicines I brought along need to be stored at low temperatures. If we keep moving around, they might lose their efficacy."

The male bodyguard standing beside her had a cross expression. The veins on his forehead were popping out as he said through gritted teeth, "He has decided to destroy our boss at any cost, even if it entails ruining the family's legacy and business. He won't stop until he has completely wrecked the family!"

As he spoke, he clutched the two huge boxes tightly. They held the precious herbs that the three had hurriedly grabbed from the laboratory. Everything else they left behind had probably been destroyed by now.

Janet felt a twinge of sympathy when she heard this. As her mind flashed back to all the difficulties she had encountered when looking for the herbs, she got a better understanding of their value.

Tugging at Brandon's sleeve, she asked, "Do you own any vacant, remote property where they can stay for the time being?"

However, she regretted the question as soon as it was out of her mouth. As she thought of the trouble brewing in the Barton family, which would certainly cause bloodshed, giving them refuge would definitely drag the Larson and the White families into the eye of the storm.

Dealing with Jeremy was already problematic enough for them. If they also got on the wrong side of the Barton family, who knew how much trouble it would
