

Even After Death

Even After Death Chapter 1648 – Olivia & Ethan – Compared to Jacqueline's haggardness, Olivia looked energetic and even radiant.

Jacqueline stared at her in disbelief. "You are okay? You were obviously infected with Deathsting Bug. If I am in pain, you should be in pain too."

Olivia said, "I am sorry to disappoint you. It really doesn't hurt much for me. I heard that you were in great pain last night and almost collapsed."

Jacqueline thought it was impossible. The man explained to her that he had spent years developing this new bug specifically for Olivia.

This was considered a trump card in her hand. If her identity was exposed, at least she could use Olivia to let others have some leeway for her. However, it appears that Olivia remained unaffected by the Deathsting Bug, significantly diminishing Jacqueline's haughtiness.

Olivia continued, "Every full moon night in the future, you will suffer the pain you suffered last night again, and it will be more painful each time. I don't care. I can accompany you slowly. It depends on whether you can bear it."

When Jacqueline heard that there would be more pain, her face was full of panic. She looked much thinner in just two days. If she had several full moons in a row, even if she was still alive, she might as well be dead.

Jacqueline said, "No, talk; I want to talk to you."

Olivia said, "That's right, you'd better show some sincerity. If you want to play any tricks again, I'm always here to accompany you."

People like Jacqueline were very afraid of death. One could argue that her fear was greater than Olivia's.

She came from a poor mountain valley, after all. Her life had been smooth sailing. She ate delicious food and drank spicy drinks every day. How could someone accustomed to a comfortable life willingly choose death?

It was just one night, and she immediately changed her mind.

Ethan immediately arranged to take them out and let Jacqueline contact the outside world in a small county town.

Jacqueline hid in the corner stealthily, telling the other party what had happened around her.

The two talked for nearly ten minutes before Jacqueline hung up the phone.

“You can go to the island we designated to remove the poison, but only three of you can go.”

“Three people?” Ethan immediately refused, saying, “Impossible. Who knows if you will set an ambush? If we don’t have an absolute chance of winning, then we’ll just wait and see.”

The other party meant that in addition to Olivia, the poison master, there would be only one person following to ensure safety.

Jacqueline stomped her feet in anger. “I’m in this state; would I still lie to you?”

Ethan: “Once we’re on the island, it’s still your territory. Who knows what will happen? Either that, or come to my island. It’s your territory. Even if I remove the poison, is there any chance of survival?”

The two sides argued over this matter again. Finally, Ethan took a step back and said, “Since neither of you trusts each other, let’s choose the territory of other countries to avoid more trouble. Both sides will go to the island tonight to remove the poison. Once we remove the poison, you have the option to flee, or we can apprehend you. It all depends on your ability.”

“No, pursuing me will take at least three days. Otherwise, as soon as I remove the poison, you will catch me alive. Then why should I bother?” Jacqueline looked at Olivia coldly and said, “Don’t you want the whereabouts of your mother? As long as you agree to this condition and 20 billion, I will tell you your mother’s whereabouts in three days. After all, she has been very good to me over the years, and I don’t want her to die.”

As soon as she put forward this condition, whether it was true or false, Olivia had to agree. She couldn’t gamble with her mother’s life.

Olivia: “Okay, I promise you, let’s pick a place. Let’s pick Sayya Island. It’s an island in Carathia, and Carathia and Arlandia are old enemies.”

Wayne Maxwell’s territory?

This guy knew how to choose a place.

Jacqueline: “Okay.”

