

Chapter 174 Sapphire Earrings

The butler soon appeared with a little black box.

Everyone held their breath while eagerly anticipating what the Cruz family had to offer.

Under everyone's gaze, the butler gingerly unwrapped the box.

On the black satin, a striking pair of sapphire earrings shone with a dark blue glow in the light.

Florence sighed in relief when she spotted the earrings.

She knew that the earrings were reasonably priced and that giving them to Loraine as a gift would be a kind gesture.

With this in mind, she nodded to the butler with satisfaction.

When Wesley saw this pair of earrings, his eyes lit up.

"If it's okay, could I take a look?" Without waiting for the response, he walked over and picked up the ear earrings. "Looking at the shining luster and the deep color of blue. Without a doubt, this is the royal blue!"

Everyone was shocked.

Of all the blue gemstone grades, royal blue was the finest. Royal blue sapphires were extremely valuable, even more so when found in pairs. However, the Cruz family could offer a pair of earrings in royal blue as a gift.

Wesley continued to say, "The most skillful artisans must have polished these sapphire earrings. The gem-cutting face's scattering effect enhances the beauty of this blue color. That's awesome!"

Wesley's praise of the earrings surprised Loraine.

It initially didn't pique Loraine's interest, but she now developed an interest and went over to take a closer look.

"This pair of earrings should be made by the royal family based on craftsmanship. The form is gorgeous and classical. It is unmistakably the Rococo style. It ought to be royal family jewelry."

Florence snickered as the uncle and nephew were having a heated conversation.

In her eyes, they hadn't experienced much of the world, making it simple to get rid of them with such a trivial gift.

She said proudly, "You did observe carefully, but you don't need to be so surprised. These earrings were handed down to us from our ancestors. My cousin married a princess and our ancestors once had a close relationship with the royal family. It's not shocking to have some royal jewelry."

While Florence showed off, Loraine and Wesley ignored her, and they continued to appreciate the earrings.

Wesley exhibited a surprised expression. "These are the earring Princess Teresa wore when she was alive."

Immediately after he finished speaking, everyone in the room gasped in amazement.

Princess Teresa was well-liked. Even two national wars were impacted inadvertently by her marriage and divorce.

The value of the earrings would unquestionably increase if they were worn by someone as influential in history as Princess Teresa.

Florence exclaimed in surprise, "That's impossible! Mr. T, you must have mistaken them!"

After recovering from the shock, everyone started conversing.

However, most people agreed with Florence, believing Wesley had made a wrong judgment.

The earrings would have been stored in a distinct location if they had been Princess Teresa's jewelry. How could the Cruz family give them to others?

When Loraine heard people criticizing Wesley's judgment, she scowled and stood up for him.

"Mr. T, you are right. The earrings are indeed the jewelry of Princess Teresa." She picked up one ear earring and turned it to a certain angle to show it to everyone. "Look, it has a carved letter T on it. This is Princess Teresa's distinctive mark."

In shock, Florence snatched the earring out of Loraine's hand. She was astounded to see the tiny letter engraved on the earring.

The earrings belonged to Princess Teresa!

That meant the gift's worth had multiplied a couple of times. It was a significant loss for her.

"Oh, my God! The Cruz family is so generous. They even gave Loraine such priceless jewelry!"

The women didn't anticipate that Loraine would acquire such priceless jewelry after taking a sip of wine. They all despised themselves for acting timidly some minutes ago.

The earrings would be theirs if they gave it a shot.

Loraine praised, "Mrs. Cruz, I didn't expect you to be so gracious. The Cruz family is deserving of its reputation of being noble."

Florence heard the compliment, but instead of being delighted by it, she was devastated.

Even the wealthy couldn't ignore this pair of sapphire earrings due to their high value. But today, she simply gave them away.

Florence felt terrible guilt at this moment, but she was powerless to take back the earrings since she had given them out in front of everyone.

All she could do was glare at the butler.

Such a useless person! How could he take out such priceless earrings!

The butler was also helpless and endured Florence's scowl while sporting a long face.

The Cruz family had only recently sold off many antiques, and those that were still in their possession were either not very precious or hard to pass on to others since they were passed from one generation to another.

Among the jewelry, he picked out a pair of sapphire earrings.

He had considered them to be of little value. However, he had not anticipated Loraine being so fortunate to receive such treasured earrings accidentally.