

Married At First Sight

Married At First Sight Chapter 3426—“I treat them all the same.” Hugh didn’t think that he treated Simone differently. He knew that Simone didn’t eat much because she was sitting right in front of him and he could see her every move.

Simone could see everything Hugh did. So it was normal for Simone to care about him.

After all, they had been friends for many years.

Hugh had seen Simone change two or three boyfriends, and every breakup seemed to be caused by a small issue that triggered a war and then ended in a breakup.

When Simone got a boyfriend, Hugh would no longer ask Simone out to avoid causing misunderstandings with Simone’s boyfriend.

Hugh was very tactful, but Simone’s ex-boyfriends all had dark faces when they met him and didn’t want to pay attention to him, as if he was the one who caused their breakup.

“Mr. Queen, you’re not a child anymore. If you meet a good girl, you should settle down. Don’t be so cynical and make your sister worry.”

Manager Dumont was a middle-aged man with a wife and children. He couldn’t help but speak of Hugh in the tone of an elder.

Hugh smiled. “I just haven’t found someone I want to settle down with. I’m going to spend my whole life with a wife, so I have to look for one carefully. Manager Dumont, do you have a good relationship with your wife? Has your relationship changed a lot since you started dating and got married?”

Manager Dumont said, “It is said that marriage is the grave of love. Many people have a good relationship when they are in love, but after getting married, they tend to have a small quarrel every three days and a big quarrel every five days.”

Hugh said, “I don’t like quarrels.”

His parents have a good relationship and rarely quarrel. The man his sister was going to marry was Kevin, who doted on her extremely. The men in the York family were famous for doting on their wives. It could be predicted that her sister would have a happy marriage life in the future.

Manager Dumont said, “There will definitely be some changes when you are in love and after you get married. After marriage, you will start to live your life, and in life, there will inevitably be some quarrels. Just get to know each other better. When my wife and I have different opinions, it's often because of the children's education. If we don't talk about the children's education, we are as close as first love. But when it comes to educating the children, we quarrel easily.

My wife always enrolls the children in too many interest classes and cram schools, so that the children don't have a single day to rest during the holidays. They are still children, and their childhood should be happy, not filled with all kinds of interest classes and cram schools. When they grow up, they will look back on their childhood and find it was not joyful at all.

I have two children; one is only eight years old, and the other is six and a half years old. The older one is in the second grade, and the younger one is in the first grade. Do you think they need to go to various cram schools?

Besides, the tuition and interest classes are expensive. We have a good income in Jensburg, but we spend all our money every month. We have to pay the mortgage and car loan and support the family, and she has signed up the children for so many interest classes. We really don't have a penny left."

Manager Dumont's words were full of helplessness. He added, "Fortunately, both of our parents have pensions, so we don't have to take care of them; otherwise, it would be even more stressful.

So, because of these things, we would often quarrel. I think we can just enroll our children in an interest class, and there is no need to enroll them in cram schools. My two children's grades are above average, so there is really no need to be so competitive. At least give the children a chance to breathe."

Manager Dumont said with a smile, "Mr. Queen, don't worry about this."

They were opinions that were about money.

Hugh was the young master of the Queen family. The Queen Enterprise was one of the largest companies in Jensburg, with countless assets, so there was no need to make a fuss over money.

After a moment of silence, Hugh said, "I'll tell my sister to give you all a raise."

Ordinary people are under great pressure to live in big cities.

On the other side of the Farrell family mansion,

Married At First Sight Chapter 3427– Clarissa was tired from walking back and forth, so she sat down on the sofa. The ashtray in front of her was already full of cigarette butts.

“Madam,”

The butler came in from outside, walked behind Clarissa, and called out respectfully.

Clarissa asked coldly, “What’s the matter?”

The butler said, “Mr. Janzen is back. Can you let him in?”

Clarissa’s face sank. She said, “I didn’t ask him to come back; who asked him to come here?”

The butler said carefully, “Madam, you’re in a bad mood. Mr. Janzen is back and can also talk to you. In the past, when you were in a bad mood, wasn’t it Mr. Janzen who accompanied you? Madam, no matter what Mr. Janzen did wrong, he is your husband, after all. You have been married for decades and have many children and grandchildren. What else can’t he let go of?”

Clarissa turned around and glared at the butler.

The butler lowered his head when Clarissa stared at him like that, not daring to meet her gaze.

“Holden has given you so much that you can speak for him like this. The mistake he made is what I cannot tolerate the most. His fate today was also his own choice. He did not choose to leave with dignity, so he has to endure everything now.”

At the beginning, Holden chose to divorce her.

Clarissa also felt that Holden still had some manly integrity, and she could still look up to him.

But Holden didn’t do that. He chose to castrate himself for the sake of the Janzen family and lost his dignity as a man. So don’t blame her for losing face for him.

Clarissa felt resentful when she thought about the unhappy marriage she had lived in for decades. Her eldest sister and her brother-in-law have a very good relationship. It’s a genuine relationship without any falsehood.

In addition to the fact that her eldest brother-in-law deeply loved her eldest sister and treated her very well, there was also Mr. Jimenez, who was loyal to her and loved her deeply.

Back then, so many assassins were sent to hunt Mr. Jimenez down, but none of them could take his life.

She even led people to intercept and kill them personally, but it ended in failure. After that, there was no news from Mr. Jimenez.

Decades passed, and Clarissa thought Mr. Jimenez had passed away.

She never thought that Mr. Jimenez was still alive.

Mr. Jimenez was nearly a hundred years old, but still alive and well. Knowing that he was still alive, Clarissa knew that the fact that she had killed her sisters would be dug out.

Normally, many people discuss her behind her back, saying that she was able to get to the top because she killed her older and younger sisters.

But those were just gossips from people who were dissatisfied with her, and there was no evidence to prove that she was the one who killed her sisters.

Clarissa didn't need to care. Since there were many people saying this, at most she would just pick out a few of them to scare the monkeys away.

Not many of the older generations in the clan knew about it, let alone the two younger generations.

The person who knew about it was the accomplice who helped her plan the conspiracy to kill her elder sister and younger sister. The whole family was wiped out by her in the same way.

What Clarissa regretted most was that she did not do a good job of rooting out the problem.

She knew that to cut the grass, she had to remove the roots. She cruelly killed all her sisters.

She was equally willing to kill her two nieces, but unfortunately, her men were useless, and the two children's nanny escaped with them.

She sent people to look for her, but they only found the nanny's body. The whereabouts of the two nieces were unknown. There was no news after that.

If she didn't remove the roots of the problem, there would be endless trouble.

Now, decades later, the eldest niece, Audrey, has returned with her men to seek revenge.

“Madam, then, I will go out and chase Mr. Janzen away.” The butler didn’t dare say anything good about Holden anymore.

If Clarissa doesn’t want to see Mr. Janzen, then she won’t see him.

Married At First Sight Chapter 3428-When the butler turned around to leave, Clarissa suddenly stopped him and ordered, “Let him in.”

She was in a bad mood, and someone scolded her, which was good for her to vent.

“Okay, I’ll go out and talk to Mr. Janzen.” The butler was very happy to see that Clarissa had listened to his advice and hurried out to open the door for Holden.

After Holden got off the car, he saw the butler and asked, “Has your madam had dinner?”

“She hasn’t eaten. She hasn’t eaten anything in a while. She just drinks water and smokes.” The butler said this and sighed. “I don’t know what kind of problem she encountered. It was so difficult that she didn’t even have the appetite to eat.”

He had not been a butler for very long, but he had worked at the Farrell family mansion for a long time.

This was the first time he saw Clarissa, the matriarch, in such a difficult situation.

After a moment of silence, Holden said, “Your madam is in a bad mood. Be careful, and don’t make her angry. I’ll go in and take a look.”

After walking a few steps, Holden turned back, walked to the front of the car, opened the door, leaned in, quickly picked up a bouquet of flowers, and got out of the car carrying a red bag.

Inside the bag was a set of jewelry.

Of course, that set of jewelry was not expensive. But he spent all the pocket money that Holden had begged from his three sons.

When the butler saw that Holden remembered to buy a bouquet of flowers and bring gifts for Clarissa, he gave Holden a thumbs up.

Not long after Holden entered the house, Marco and his two brothers came back, followed by Kathryn.

Kathryn was the last one to come back.

The butler came out again and waited for Kathryn to get off the car. He followed Kathryn into the house and said, "Mr. Janzen and the three young masters are back, but they still can't persuade Madam to eat. Miss, you have to be the head of the family. Even if the sky falls, you can't starve yourself."

Kathryn said as she walked, "It feels like the sky is falling for my mom right now."

Everything that was looted would soon be returned to the descendants of her aunt's branch, which was like the end of the world for her mother.

The butler heard that Kathryn knew about it.

He asked with concern, "Miss, what happened? Did the company encounter difficulties? Is the capital chain broken?"

In that case, would Clarissa still have money to pay them wages?

If the Farrell Group runs out of funds and fails to raise money for turnover, it will not only affect the people in the company but also those who work in the Farrell family mansion.

Kathryn glanced at the butler and said, "Don't worry about your salary; you won't be short of money."

Having said that, Kathryn left the butler and walked quickly into the house.

The butler stopped, looking worried.

From what Kathryn said, there really was a big problem in the Farrell Group.

No wonder Clarissa was so worried that she didn't even want to eat.

It's really hard to survive these days. Even a large group like the Farrell Group, which has been in business for decades or even hundreds of years, would go bankrupt.

The butler has already thought about the bankruptcy of Farrell Group.

When Kathryn entered the room, she heard her dad and brothers comforting her mom and coaxing her to eat a little.

Holden brought out the food himself and placed it in front of Clarissa.

How could Clarissa have an appetite for the food that was heated over and over again?

At that time, Clarissa didn't even want to eat freshly cooked dishes.

Clarissa couldn't bear the thought that everything she had now would go back to her sister's family (Audrey's family), that she would be ruined, and that her children would not end up well.

There was no appetite at all.

She didn't want to eat; she just wanted to kill Audrey's family, kill Liberty and Serenity, and silence them all. Then there would be no one to compete with her children for everything in the Farrell family.

Unfortunately, it is not like decades ago now. There are surveillance cameras everywhere, and she can no longer do it as she did before.

Besides, her eldest niece (Audrey) and her family have backers.
